FORTY KNOWN DEAD | RED SOX SWEEP IN SOUTHERN FLOOD

Eleven Persons Were Drowned In Villages of Chimney Rock and Bat Cave, N. C.

Atlanta Ga., July 19 .- As reports filtered through today from parts of western North Carolina the death list western North Carolina the death list resulting from floods in southeastern North Carolina continued to grow. Six additional fatalities were reported today, bringing the known death list to forty, while at least six persons were missing.

Eleven persons were drowned in the villages of Bat Cave and Chimney Rock, N. C., which meager reports show were hard hit by the storm. Two unidentified bodies were found near Belmont, N. C., today, while another death is reported from near Greenville, S. C., in the falling of a railway scaffold undermined by the floods.

While flood waters were receding in North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia today, rivers in South Carolina were rising.

Two Villages Washed Away.

Asheville, N. C., July 19.—Flood waters in the Carolinas and portions of adjacent states were rapidly receding today, leaving in their wake a property loss variously estimated at from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000, and a list of deaths from drowning that has steadily increased since the waters rose Sunday. Today the toll of human life stood at thirty-four, with prospects that it might be increased still further.

Two small villages in Rutherford county, North Carolina, known as Chimney Rock and Bat Cave, suffered severe damage from the volume of water that swept down the narrow valley of the Rocky Broad river, according to meager reports reaching here. The towns, each of which has a hundred or more inhabitants, are more than twenty-five miles from a railroad and without wire communication.

Even Spectaphyre S. C. came a Two Villages Washed Away.

From Spartanburg, S. C., came a report that persons arriving there said almost all of Chimney Rock was washed away and that there was no sign of its inhabitants. It was pointed out, however, that they might have reached high ground in time to save themselves. Eight persons were said to have been drowned at Bat Cave.

Loss to railroads, industrial plants

Cave.

Loss to railroads, industrial plants and agricultural interests a North and South Carolina has mounted into the millions, and it may be weeks before the transportation system is restored. Nearly all passengers marooned since Sunday on trains in this section had been removed today, however, and in many localities repair work was being rushed and thousands of cotton mill spindles were beginning to turn again.

Conditions in Virginia and West Virginia were almost normal today and great loss was not feared to the coast section of South Carolina.
