New York, July 28.—Bradstreet's motor-ow will say: New Tork, July 18.—Bradstreet's motorrow will say: Trade does not pause, nor does there seem any doubt as to the future. Even in sections, the northwest, for example, where talk of damage to wheat is medi rife, buying pursues the even tenor of its way, and, indeed, purchases for fall are sarlier and heavier than a year are. In fact trands in general, except in the rain-weep parts of the southeast, indicate that buying for immediate shipment is comparatively good, while ordering for fall delivery is growing and will be heavier during the first fortnight of August. Mingled with these tendencies is, of course, a spirit of conservatism, predicated, as it is, on a desire to guard against heavily stocking up with highpriced goods, but counteracting this are fears that supplies may not be sufficient to meet requirements.
Industrial operations continue relatively at high speed; summer shutdowns are for shorter periods than usual in the iron and steel industry, and excessive heat has subsequently curtailed reaction.
