Army Officers Have Laugh at Judge Who
Sentences to Army
Whenever District Judge Sears gives a young offender a suspended jail sentence on condition that he "join the army or navy," a loud laugh goes up from the recruiting stations of these two branches of Uncle Sam's fighting service.
Looked at carelessly, this seems a good solution of the problem. It is better, isn't it, to have a young man in the army or navy than in jail. He'll be earning his own living, defending his country and "making a man" of himself.
But to sentence a man to "join the army or navy" is about as sensible as to sentence him to "accept a position in a bank." He has just about as much chance of getting into the bank as into the army or navy.
In the first place, only about one applicant in three is able to pass the physical examination. And, in the second place, conviction or even arrest on a charge of any seriousness at all is an effectual bar to enlistment.
"The army and navy are not maintained to reform bad eggs," said one man. "A good moral character is as much a requisite as good physique. Judges would do well to inform themselves on the subject."

I. C. Special to Be
'In Omaha August 12
A special train of traffic officials and representatives of the road is now traveling over the Illinois Central lines. Every point on the lines will be visited during the excursion.
Omaha will be the last city to be visited by this special. The train comes to Omaha from Fort Dodge, August 12. It arrives at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The traffic men will remain here until 6:30 that night before returning to Chicago, the headquarters of the road.
The local terminal will be inspected and a trip will be made to the South Side station.
Every important city in which an Illinois Central office is located is represented on the special train. H. G. Powell, division freight agent, is the Omaha man making the trip.

Twenty Per Cent More to Build Missouri Pacific Now
It would cost 20 per cent more to reproduce the Missouri Pacific railroad lines in Nebraska today than it would have cost in 1909, according to statements of Chief Engineer Perdun at that road at the hearing of the road's passenger rate case before Referee Frank H. Gaines in the federal building.
"Aside from the increased cost of materials," he said, "the cost of labor has gone up and the efficiency of labor has gone down."

Harte to Build Pump
Station at Walnut Hill
John H. Harte is the low bidder for the job of constructing the big Walnut Hill pumping station for the Metropolitan Water District of Omaha. The contract may be awarded most any time. The award has been delayed for some time because so many of the members of the water board were out of the city that it was impossible to get a quorum.

The Secret of the Submarine
By E. Alexander Powell
Author of "The End of the Trail," "Fighting in Flanders," "The Road to Glory," "Viva la France," etc.
ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT.
Lieutenant Jarvis Hope is detailed by the United States Navy to investigate and report his findings on the invention of Dr. Cleo Romero, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lieutenant arrives in Valdivia and is welcomed by the inventor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trial trip of the inventor's boat, a "Jasmar" helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lieutenant arrives in Valdivia and is welcomed by the inventor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trial trip of the inventor's boat, a "Jasmar" helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. On the trial trip of the inventor's boat, a "Jasmar" helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection.

The repeated failures of Mahlin and Satsuma to gain possession of the secret of the submarine finally drove their employers to desperation, and harsh measures were decided upon. The spies were summoned before the black council, the executive body of the secret service of their government. The meeting was held in the council chamber amid black trappings and ghastly reminders of the fate that awaited treachery or failure. A grave assembly of masked figures listened coldly while their chief, the only one whose identity was not hidden behind a black mask, questioned Mahlin and Satsuma regarding their activities in pursuit of the much-desired secret. Their explanations failed to satisfy. The decision of the council was announced cold-bloodedly and emphatically by the chief. They must secure the secret within the next four weeks or death would be the penalty!

Upon their return to San Francisco Hope found awaiting him at his hotel an official envelope bearing the familiar heading of the Navy department. The letter it contained, which was marked "Strictly Confidential," was signed by an official high in the bureau of naval intelligence.
"Are you as perhaps aware," the letter concluded, "there exists at the moment between the United States and a certain power whose name it is unnecessary to mention a situation of the utmost gravity. This power is convinced that we have permitted our navy to deteriorate to such an extent that hostilities could be inaugurated against us with a reasonable chance of success. It is no exaggeration, therefore, to assert that the discovery of Dr. Burke's formula may save this nation from invasion. Under these circumstances there is no need for me to urge you to prosecute the search with the utmost energy. The

It is no exaggeration, therefore, to assert that the discovery of Dr. Burke's formula may save this nation from invasion. Under these circumstances there is no need for me to urge you to prosecute the search with the utmost energy. The secret of the submarine finally drove their employers to desperation, and harsh measures were decided upon. The spies were summoned before the black council, the executive body of the secret service of their government. The meeting was held in the council chamber amid black trappings and ghastly reminders of the fate that awaited treachery or failure. A grave assembly of masked figures listened coldly while their chief, the only one whose identity was not hidden behind a black mask, questioned Mahlin and Satsuma regarding their activities in pursuit of the much-desired secret. Their explanations failed to satisfy. The decision of the council was announced cold-bloodedly and emphatically by the chief. They must secure the secret within the next four weeks or death would be the penalty!

Upon their return to San Francisco Hope found awaiting him at his hotel an official envelope bearing the familiar heading of the Navy department. The letter it contained, which was marked "Strictly Confidential," was signed by an official high in the bureau of naval intelligence.
"Are you as perhaps aware," the letter concluded, "there exists at the moment between the United States and a certain power whose name it is unnecessary to mention a situation of the utmost gravity. This power is convinced that we have permitted our navy to deteriorate to such an extent that hostilities could be inaugurated against us with a reasonable chance of success. It is no exaggeration, therefore, to assert that the discovery of Dr. Burke's formula may save this nation from invasion.
