

Many Schools Are Located In and Around Lincoln

Lincoln and environs contain a collegiate atmosphere because, in addition to the major institution, the State university, there are located other schools around it which are of distinct importance in their fields.

Most of these schools are denominational. They are located where the students can have the utmost for their expenditures in school life; they are different from the university, but they fill a niche in life which makes them indispensable.

At University Place is situated Wesleyan university. This is a Methodist institution of upward of 2,000 students. It is one of the most thorough institutions the big church has in the country, and its faculty is one of the most zealous and capable of any in the employ of the parent church.

The institution has a large campus and fosters athletics in a way that attracts hundreds of manly young men to it. It seized all of the state collegiate athletic prizes worth having last year, among the secondary schools of Nebraska, and grabbed some of the honors from a number of the best out-of-the-state institutions of its class.

Its basketball team ever defeated the fast Cornhusker quintet last season and thereby achieved something which Coach Kline had been seeking ever since he came to the school.

Social life at Wesleyan is developed upon a most commendable plane, too. Young men and young women have their societies which give regular functions and which bring to the student just enough of this side of life to invigorate them and yet which are not carried to an extreme in any sense.

Strangers who do not enter these societies are provided for in church and faculty functions of various kinds—and every student who enters this school is made to feel that he is an entity. He is kept track of, kept in touch with and the ministrations are to his social self as well as to his mental, moral and physical comfort.

Therein lies the success of the denominational school a number of the faculty members of Wesleyan feel. They devote much time to a study of their students and to touching them where the points of contact are most in need of sensitiveness.

Cotner University. At Bethany, about three miles east of Lincoln, the Church of Christ years ago located Cotner university. The school is one of the best in the west in this denomination and has been growing from year to year steadily in a way to encourage some of its oldest friends.

The institution makes men and women. It is the modest insistence of the faculty members that an overwhelmingly large number of their graduates, and of those who attend the institution, make broad-minded, splendid men and women when they get out into the world.

That claim has never been disproved, and it is the hope of the faculty to see that such men and women are sent out that it never will be.

In addition to the academic courses which it offers, the institution gives a theological course which prepares pastors for its charges and which has developed numbers of those who are now filling pulpits over the state. The number is not large that goes out each year, but they are well prepared and all of them have entered into their work in a way that justified the faith which their instructors had in them.

Union College. At College View, four and a half miles southeast of Lincoln, the Adventists have an institution. It is Union college, and its students are drawn from a dozen or more states west of the Mississippi river. Although distinctly a church school academic courses are given by it and along with the men who enter the ministry are graduated those who follow some of the other vocations in the employ of the denomination.

A sanitarium is operated in connection with the college and nurses are educated there. The same board has charge of the two institutions. The college is run on highly creditable lines and the aim of the faculty, from the beginning, has been to put the institution on the same plane with other institutions of this character.

An increased enrollment from year to year testifies as to the efficiency of the school and its operation from the standpoint of the church members themselves.

The site of Union college was fixed near this city after a dozen cities of the west and south had contended vigorously for the honor. Various activities of the Adventist denomination are connected with the college and are located at College View.

Nebraska School of Business. Under the direction of President T. A. Blakeslee the Nebraska School of Business has taken high ranking in its field in this state. The institution has been enrolling students steadily during the last few months and there are indications that the present location will be sorely overtaken by the time the fall terms opens. The institution is located in the new Gas and Electric company building at Fourteenth and O street and is well equipped for every part of the work which it is undertaking. The record of its students in the business field has been of the best and the instructors have endeavored to improve it even though they have had a high mark to aim at from its inception.

The Lincoln Business College. This institution is one of the oldest west of the Mississippi river and its students are found in all lines of business in the west. The Lincoln Business college is located at the northwest corner of Fourteenth and P streets in one of the best arranged buildings for this purpose in the country. The faculty contains some of the best-known commercial instructors in the west and the heads of each department have been selected with an especial view to their fitness for the careful work which must be given by teachers of this class. The school has graduated more students who are now occupying places in the business world than most any other institution of its kind. There are very few which lead it, in the belief of competent judges, and those connected with it insist that its record resulted from the care which has always been taken with all the students enrolled with it.

University School of Music. Across from the state university, at the corner of Eleventh and R streets, the university school of music has stood ever since its organization. The institution began to develop and have a place in the musical institutions of the west when Willard Kimball came here to take charge of it. He came from Grinnell, Ia. here and his success in the Hawkeye institution has been more than duplicated here.

Mr. Kimball has had on the rolls of his institution representatives of some of the best-known families of the state, and although it has been a select list to respond to has not failed to bring forth most sincere praise from all of his students. The faculty of the school has been selected with great care by Mr. Kimball personally and in the list of instructors are found some of the best artists obtainable at this distance from the great musical centers of the country.

Card-Adams Motor Company

The Card-Adams Motor company, which has recently moved into its fine quarters at 1640 O street in Lincoln, near the Seventeenth and O street road to the state fair grounds, is finely situated to handle the extensive trade which has been coming to the firm in the past year, necessitating its moving to its new quarters.

The company handles the well-known Chandler car and covers a territory comprising Nebraska, South Dakota and western Iowa, and has branches in Omaha and Des Moines, from which points it is able to give quick deliveries and handle the business in good shape.

The business here is in charge of W. S. Adams and a large office force; the Omaha business is handled by the Omaha Chandler company at 2520 Farnam, and is in charge of A. D. Northrup and Gus Bolton, while the Lincoln retail end is looked after by the Kimball Sales company at Lincoln, which does an astonishing business in Lancaster county and this part of the state.

August Molzer, Violin Teacher

The Molzer Violin school of Lincoln, Neb., took up quarters in its new location, 1213 O street, where, in addition to spacious studios, it will have a recital hall large enough to seat 250 people.

Seven years ago, August Molzer, a pupil of the famous Sevcik, started the school with the idea of establishing an institution where the violin should be the sole consideration. That he has succeeded is proven by the fact that constantly increasing patronage made it necessary for him to locate in larger quarters. A graduate from Molzer is taught the Sevcik method of technique by one of the pupils of its originator, who trained such celebrities as Kubelik, Kocian and Marie Hall. Mr. Molzer is the only certified exponent of the Sevcik method in Nebraska.

Nebraska Buick Auto Company

Automobiles come and automobiles go, but it appears to be that the reliable Buick holds its place with the people as the reliable car from which good service can be had. The demand for the Buick six-cylinder cars during the present year, when over 66,000 were built and placed on the market, forced the factory to make new arrangements for 1917, and consequently they expect to furnish the 1917 trade nearly 100,000 cars, if not more than that.

The light four-cylinder car has given such great satisfaction that the company will put out about 60,000 of that model. H. E. Sides, general manager for the Nebraska company, says that the demand in this state and Iowa next year will be double that of the present year.
