SOCIETY LEADERS LOST TO FRIENDS

But It Turns Out They Were Engaged in the Innocent Pastime of Shopping.

AND THEY ARE SOON FOUND

By MELLIFICIA—September 1.

Would you believe that some of Omaha's most prominent women could successfully conceal their whereabouts from their families and friends for several hours? That is what at least four of our best-known women did without trying to do it at all. They were not at home, their husbands missed them, their maids knew that they would not be at home for luncheon, and yet where they were no one knew. Friends knew that they were lunching together, but where and with whom they were having luncheon they had no idea.

I sought for them as the parents did for the little boy "who wouldn't say his prayers," but in vain. Rumor had it that the members of the "Original Cooking Club" were to have one of their little luncheons that noon. But the hostess was unknown.

The solution of this little mystery is that these same society women were simply doing a little innocent shopping downtown and had luncheon together, with the result that they were "lost" for the time being.

At the Field Club. Foursome parties will be entertained at the Field club Saturday evening by J. L. Hyatt, Sam Reynolds and J. C. Hartnett.

Mrs. G. C. Cunningham entertained a children's party at the closing matinee dance of the season at the Field club.

Miss Virginia Dyball entertained the Neversaw club at the matinee dance at the Field club today. The club members and their guests were:

- Misses—Margaret Wahl, Edw. Beckwith, Katherine Zmarick, Clara McAdams, Edw. Widener, Mary McAdams.
- Misses—Tison Wahl, Marie Guid, Dorothy Cassan, Oswaldella McCoy, Dorothy Gray.

At Happy Hollow Club. Mrs. C. F. Cavanaugh entertained a birthday party Tuesday evening for her sister, Miss Myrtle Judge. The evening was spent in dancing and games. Those present were:

- Misses—Hella Mrovenack, Margaret Lanning, Cecelia, Harry, Clara Mrovenack, Barbara Augustine, Clara Cox, Margaret McMillan, Helen Russell, Mary.
- Misses—Katherine Lanning, Irene Blank, Marie Mrovenack, Veronice McDickrick, Ellen Dougherty, Barbara Augustine, Martha Wellner, Marjorie Noon, Myrtle Judge.
- Misses—Frank Smith, Thomas Dorr, Arthur Cox, Thomas Fitzgerald, Lord Williams, Francis Murphy, Thomas Richmond, John Scott, Edward Kelley.

At Happy Hollow Club. Mrs. A. G. Edwards was one member of a Dutch treat party of eight who took luncheon at the club today and spent the afternoon playing whist.

Reservations have been made for the Saturday evening dinner-dance by James Williamson, by J. B. Rushton for eight guests and by George A. Roberts for ten guests.

Miss Luella Petersen entertained at luncheon today for Miss Marguerite Klingbeil, who is a bride-to-be. Pink roses were used on the table. The place cards were hand-painted kevelies, draped with miniature bridal veils and carrying bridal bouquets. Covers were laid for twelve. The afternoon was spent in playing bridge.

Betrothal Announcement. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mock of Milwaukee, Wis., announce the engagement of their daughter Florence to Mr. Frederic Rosenstock of Omaha.

Miss Mock has been a very popular visitor here as the guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fellheimer.

Social Gossip.

Mrs. Charles T. Kountze and Mrs. T. Stewart, II, returned last evening from Clear Water Lake, Minn., where Mrs. Kountze motored with Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sweet of Minnesota, on their return from a visit in Omaha, to bring Miss Elinor home.

Mrs. Joseph Barker and family have returned from spending the summer at Sater's Point, South Dartmouth, Mass.

Was Postponed.

On account of the delay in the arrival of Miss Frances Paine of Aberdeen, Wash., who comes this evening to be the guest of Miss Marjorie Poole, the tea which Miss Ruth Slabaugh was to have given today in her honor and in honor of Mrs. Frank Cooper of Kansas City, was cancelled. Miss Slabaugh may entertain later for several visiting young women.

In and Out of the Bee Hive.

Miss Irene Dyball has returned from a trip to Nevada.

Miss Alice Virginia Davis is expected home Sunday from a motor trip through New England.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cox returned Thursday from spending their vacation at Pella, Mason City, Arnold's Park and Lake Okoboji, Ia.

Miss Stella Abraham will leave September 13 to enter the State university at Lincoln. She has been a teacher of German at Vinton school.

Miss Martha Friedman, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. Weiss, leaves Saturday for Chicago, where she will be joined by her brother and go on to New York. Miss Friedman will return in time to take up her studies at Hunter college.

Mrs. David Newman and daughter, Esther, returned yesterday from Detroit, Chicago and Iowa points, Mr. Newman having gone on to New York.

Mrs. Isidor Newman left this morning for New York to attend the wedding of her niece, Miss Ruth Marx, and Mrs. Philip Glick, which will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria next week.

Miss Pauline Greenbaum of Chicago is visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Marx. Mrs. Marx will give a luncheon party, followed by supper at the Hanshaw for her tomorrow evening, which will include ten guests.

Timely Fashion Hint

Handsome in the extreme is this lovely embroidered net collar. It comes high in the neck and falls below on the shoulders. Long points fasten in a V in front. This model was one of those shown at a recent neckwear exhibit participated in by about twenty manufacturers, each of whom submitted five models. The object of the exhibit was to standardize neckwear styles.

Love vs. Friendship

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Several weeks ago I wrote an article on this subject. One of my readers, a member of the medical profession, has written me so sanely and sincerely in reply to my article that I want to quote from his letter and again to point out some of the qualities which make for love which shall be lasting and worth while.

All of us remember the beautiful lines from the Psalms, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." Nothing that is built on foundations of sand can last when the storms of life beat upon it. A love that is not based on strong foundations can not weather time and stress.

Most of the tragedies of marriage are due to weak foundations. When the builders of life hurry too fast and do not test the foundation on which they build, they practically invite failure.

My correspondent, J. J. W., says in part: "The love that lasts is the love of the minds and souls of men and women whose thoughts run on parallel lines, whose aims and objects of life are co-operative and whose characters are companionable. A love that fades is a love based on jealousy, on appreciation of things that are only of a temporary nature and on a combination of two objects whose very atoms lack the property of union."

Doesn't this sound sane and sensible? A wild flare of feeling—a temporary infatuation, an attraction that can be analyzed into the fact that some little trick of personality appeals isn't much on which to base a life partnership, is it?

Youth plunges headlong into situations which it imagines are going to be permanent—and youth lets impulse and instinct and a desire for companionship and sympathy mortgage its whole future.

If friendship is to be based on congeniality—and all of us know that it has—how much more must a lifelong friendship have congeniality on which to build? Marriage can not be a success unless in addition to love (in its generally accepted meaning) it has a foundation of honest liking, wholesome respect, mutual interest and broad toleration of points of difference.

As a matter of fact love in its generally accepted sense isn't love at all! Real love ought to include these qualities of liking and understanding and respect.

An emotional attraction—a sort of chemical affinity—an instinctive appeal are all needed to make up love, but they are not love itself; instead they are but one of its parts.

When a man and woman are not congenial, when they do not enjoy discussing such impersonal things as politics and current events, when they do not respect each other's work and ambitions, they have no right to marry. Marriage is a life partnership.

Love is a wonderful big thing—not a series of selfish demands on the beloved's personality and time, but a series of unselfish adjustments to the beloved's personality and time. Real love gives, while infatuation asks. Real love seeks understanding, while the love of the moment demands that it be understood.

Not on shifting uncertainties, not on petty trivialities and not on turbulent emotion can you build a real love. Instead, it has to be based on life's big realities, which are honest and stable and for all time.

Marriage must be a mating of souls which are in tune and of minds which understand. The physical can be sacred and beautiful only when the mental and the spiritual give it life and color and poetry. The love that lasts thinks and aspires and understands in addition to feeling.

Foods and Their Value
An egg becomes a complete food if rice is added to it.

Dried figs are more nourishing than an equal weight of bread.

Half a pint of milk and half a pound of dates forms a perfect meal.

There is no greater stimulating restorative than a tumbler of hot milk.

By CONSTANCE CLARKE.

At this season of the year fruit and vegetables are plentiful, and heavy food and much meat should be avoided, and fresh fruit and vegetables should be served at every meal.

Salads are essential. They should very seldom be served with heavy main-course, as the plain French dressing, properly seasoned, is more digestible during hot weather. This is a new one which is especially delicious:

At What Age Should a Woman or Man Marry?

BY ELIZABETH M. DORRELL.

Some persons seem to be able to work themselves into quite a healthful glow over the suggestion that one of our candidates for a certain high office not long ago proposed to marry at the ripe old age of 80, to thereabouts.

"Why so hot, my little sir?" What difference does age make if two people, who are at least old enough to know their own minds, propose to clasp hands and slide down the remainder of life's hill together? Personally, it gives me joy to know that even extreme old age has its compensations.

Who was it said, "Marry early. And if opportunity permits, often?" Age cannot wither the hope of marriage in some gentle hearts, nor custom stale its infinite variety.

With the lady in question, marriage has evidently become a habit, like having cold Sunday night suppers, or boiled dinners Monday, or any other little household rut. And by so doing, this little custom of taking a fresh husband every time one dropped and died, she has held her mind in a marriageable and plastic state.

There lies the crux of the whole matter. You are neither too old nor too young to marry if your mind is in that adaptable phase which will enable you to glide gently around your partner's sharp corners without dislocating his life-long habit of wanting a large cup of coffee with his dinner, while you prefer to sip a demitasse after the dessert, or if he will defer to your preference for your own brand of religion instead of adopting that of your in-laws.

Persons of cast-iron habits in daily life or even adamant mental attitudes, should never marry, no matter what their age. I have seen young girls of 18 so narrow-minded and set in their opinions that they were predestined old maids in thought even if they married a dozen times. I have also seen old ladies of 60 whose mental plane was so youthful that I did not wonder that men still wanted to marry them.

Did you ever see a boy with a narrow forehead and green eyes set close together without knowing that at 40 he would be a deacon and pass the plate in church and make his wife scald the tea leaves twice?

Did you ever see a fat, roly-poly boy with thin, light hair and a genius for making friends, that you did not know he would grow into a commercial traveler and bring his wife a box of candy when he had stayed out too late?

Did you ever see a perfectly selfish young girl, who thought of nothing but silk stockings and how to keep her complexion, that you couldn't see the patient way her husband would have to sew on his own buttons and set the table Sunday nights, while the neighbors would always be buttoning her children's pinafores?

Age has nothing to do with a person's right to marry. I heard the other day of an old lady who was going into incoherent raptures over the birth of her thirty-second grandchild. What a born grandmother that woman was! She probably had a genius for home-making.

Tips on Fashions

Silk jersey headed with fur is still in high favor. Plaid silk waists, with high collars, are among the advanced autumn waist models.

Some of the new coats for motorists are made with several lines of shirring to mark the waist line.

Ball fringe is used as an edging for skirts and tunics, usually in the same color as the material of the frock.

Wool stockings are not a will-o'-the-wisp any more. The indications point strongly to their use next winter. Already they are worn on the golf links, often in bright colors.

The most fashionable jewelry of the moment is the so-called costume jewelry and while jewelers report a falling off in the demand for high-priced pearls and rubies, emeralds and sapphires, the cheaper stones like the peridot, aquamarine and tourmaline are in the first favor.

Especially pleasing because of the charm of its simplicity and its extreme usefulness is a guilpe of fine sheer white organza having a collar of the same material, edged with plaid ruffe of the throat of crossed balise, each side of the front closing being finished with a similar ruffe in graduated width.

Wouldn't it be strange if at this late date women should evolve a really interesting reformed dress? There has been talk of dress reform for women for years and years, but never has any results at all, permanent or far-reaching been attained. Now the talk has come up again.
