

Wilson's Speech Accepting His Re-Nomination

Following is the full text of the address of President Wilson in response to the speech of notification, delivered at Shadow Lawn on Saturday afternoon:

Senator James G. Thompson of the Notification Committee, Fellow Citizens: I cannot express the leadership and responsibility which the national democratic convention has again, in such generous fashion, asked me to accept without first expressing the profound gratitude to the party for the trust it reposes in me after four years of fiery trial in the midst of affairs of unprecedented difficulty, and the keen sense of responsibility which this honor fills (I had almost said burdens) me as I think of the great issues of national life and policy involved in the present and immediate future conduct of our government. I shall seek, as I have always sought, to justify the extraordinary promise made to me by the party in the most conscientious and thorough manner possible. I have no doubt that the party will find me true to the promise. I have no doubt that the party will find me true to the promise.

ment of labor at the disposal of the working man when in search of work. We have effected the emancipation of the children of the country by releasing them from hurtful labor. We have instituted a system of national aid in the building of schools and colleges, and the country has been feeling after a century. We have sought to equalize taxation by means of an equitable income tax, and have taken the steps that ought to have been taken at the outset to open up the resources of Alaska. We have provided for national defense upon a scale never before in the history of the world, and have driven the tariff lobby from cover and obliged it to substitute solid argument for private influence.

This extraordinary record must stand like a platform, a list of sacred promises; but it is not. It is a record of promises made four years ago and now actually redeemed in constructive legislation. These things must profoundly disturb the thoughts and confound the plans of those who have made themselves believe that the democratic party neither understood nor was ready to assist the business of the country in the great enterprise which it is its privilege to undertake. We have not only not failed, but we have succeeded in every thing that we have undertaken. We have not only not failed, but we have succeeded in every thing that we have undertaken.

was plain and it was imperative that we should live up to it if we were to deserve the trust of any real partizan of the right as free men of the country. We have dealt with big and weak states have the right to expect to be dealt with exactly as the people of big and powerful states would be. We have acted upon that principle in dealing with the people of the world.

Our recent pursuit of bandits into Mexican territory was no violation of that principle. We ventured to enter Mexican territory only because there were no military forces in Mexico that could protect our border from hostile attack and our own people from violence, and we have demonstrated there no single act of hostility or interference even with the sovereign authority of the Republic of Mexico. It was a plain case of the violation of our own sovereignty which could not wait to be vindicated by damage to the people of Mexico. The authorities of Mexico were powerless to prevent it. Many serious wrongs against the property, persons and lives of our citizens, of Americans have been committed within the territory of Mexico herself during this period. We have not only not failed, but we have succeeded in every thing that we have undertaken.

moment the war in Europe is over. They will be new problems, most of them many will be old problems in a new setting and with new elements. The country has never dealt with or reckoned the force and meaning of before. They will require for their solution new thinking, new courage and new resources, and in some matters radical reconsiderations of policy. We must be ready to surprise our resources alike of brains and of materials.

Much in Store in Future. It is not a future to be afraid of. It is, rather, a future to stimulate and excite us to the display of the best powers that are in us. We may enter it with confidence when we are sure that we understand it and we have provided ourselves already with the means of understanding it. Look first at what will be necessary that the nations of the world should do to make the days to come tolerable and fit to live and work in, and then look to our part in what is to follow and our own duty of preparation. For we must be prepared both in resources and in policy. There must be a just and settled peace, and we here in America must contribute the full force of our intelligence and energy and authority as a nation to the organization of that peace upon world-wide foundations that will not only be stable, but will be just and equitable. The nation should be forced to take sides in an quarrel, in which its own honor and integrity and the fortunes of its own people are not involved; but no nation can any longer remain neutral as against any willful disturbance of the peace of the world. The efforts of war can no longer be confined to the arena of battle. No nation stands wholly apart in interest when the life and interests of all nations are in the agonies of contention and peril. If hopeful and generous enterprise is to be renewed, if the healing and helpful arts of peace are to be revived when peace comes, a new atmosphere of justice and friendship must be generated by means of the world's peace. The nation should be forced to take sides in an quarrel, in which its own honor and integrity and the fortunes of its own people are not involved; but no nation can any longer remain neutral as against any willful disturbance of the peace of the world.

our water power. I wish we could have made more progress than we have made in this vital matter; and I call once more, with the deepest earnestness and solicitude, upon the advocates of a careful and prudent conservation, on the one hand, and the advocates of a free and inviting field for private capital, on the other, to get together in a spirit of genuine accommodation and agreement and set this great policy forward at once.

We must hasten and quicken the spirit and efficiency of labor throughout our whole industrial system by everywhere and in all occupations doing justice to the laborer, not only by paying a living wage but also by making all the conditions that surround labor what they ought to be. And we must do more than justice. We must safeguard life and promote health and safety in every occupation in which they are threatened or imperiled. That is more than justice, and better, because it is humanity and economy. We must co-ordinate the railway systems of the country for national use, and must facilitate and promote their development with a view to that co-ordination and to their better adaptation as a whole to the life and trade and defense of the nation. The life of the nation is at stake, and we must not only safeguard it, but we must also make it more efficient and complete. We must co-ordinate the railway systems of the country for national use, and must facilitate and promote their development with a view to that co-ordination and to their better adaptation as a whole to the life and trade and defense of the nation.

Business Men Delivered. There is one circumstance connected with this program which ought to be very plain to every man who is interested in the interests which the republican party had entered to and fostered at the expense of the country. It is that the republican party has not only not failed, but we have succeeded in every thing that we have undertaken.

Looks to Party Record. What is that record? What were the democratic called into power to do? What things had long waited to be done? How did the democrats do them? It is a record of extraordinary length and variety, rich in elements of many kinds, and showing a principle throughout and susceptible of brief recital.

Fighting For Liberty. For it is his emancipation that they are seeking—blindly, it may be, and as yet ineffectually, but with profound and passionate purpose and with their resources at their right, apply what true American principles you will—any principle that an American citizen would apply to his own country. We have not only not failed, but we have succeeded in every thing that we have undertaken.

Owe Duty to Industry. Besides contributing our ungrudging moral and practical support to the establishment of peace throughout the world we must also contribute our full force of our intelligence and energy and authority as a nation to the organization of that peace upon world-wide foundations that will not only be stable, but will be just and equitable.

Platform Definite Pledge. I have not spoken explicitly, gentlemen, of the platform adopted at St. Louis; but it has been implicit in all that I have said; meaning, the people of the United States do not need to be assured now that that platform is a definite pledge, a practical program which has been revised in them that our promises are to be kept.

At home also we must see to it that the man who plan and develop and direct our enterprise are to enjoy justice and settled conditions of law, a policy accommodated to the present progress. We have set the just and reasonable limits. We have put all kinds of unfair limitation under the ban and penalty of the law. We have barred monopoly. These fair and just things being excluded, we must now question the law and facilitate enterprise by every just means within our choice. There will be peace in the business world and, with peace, revived confidence and life.

We ought both to husband and develop our national resources, our mines, our forests,
