

HOSTILE CROWD APPLAUDS HUGHES

Republican Speaks to Vociferous Gathering of Democrats at Nashville, Tenn.

COMES THROUGH HECKLING

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 5.—In hostile territory which no republican presidential nominee ever has visited before, Charles E. Hughes last night faced a tumultuous audience in the auditorium here.

"I believe there is no grievance with respect to labor," Mr. Hughes said, "that cannot be settled by a fair, candid examination of the facts."

Wouldn't Surrender Principle.

"We have in the past had to deal frequently with the opposition of employers to the principle of arbitration. Some times they have refused to arbitrate disputes. Public opinion has been against them. I stand here firmly for the principle of arbitrating industrial disputes, and I would not surrender it to anybody in the country."

"I believe that anything that is right in this country can be settled right. What is our republican government? What are our free institutions? We have come down the long course of history with the people fighting slowly, slowly—now with defeat and now with victory—for a recognition of the reign of reason instead of the reign of tyranny and force."

"Now, then, I stand for two things: First for the principle of fair, impartial, thorough, candid arbitration, and, second, for legislation on facts according to the necessities of the case. And I am opposed to being dictated to either in the executive department or congress by any power on earth before the facts are known."

How to Preserve Country.

"We have a great country and a great future. But it can only be preserved in one way. That way is the way of honest, fair investigation and candid treatment. Show me the way that is right and I will take it; but I won't take any way that I do not know anything about."

The audience, which had interrupted Mr. Hughes repeatedly in the earlier portion of his speech to cheer for Wilson, heard the nominee's declaration in silence and at its conclusion applauded him.

Tonight's address, the second of the day, was delivered before a crowded house. The crowd came early and remained to hear all the nominee had to say, but before he started it showed plainly that many Wilson supporters were present.

J. W. Taylor, republican state chairman, the first speaker, was interrupted time after time by cheers for Wilson. Amid a burst of Wilson cheers he sat down and the second speaker, George N. Tillman, chairman of the meeting, stood up. Mr. Tillman was on his feet for ten minutes, much of the time vainly endeavoring to make himself heard. He introduced Mr. Hughes and the audience waited in silence.

People Taking Stock.

"I shall not forget the warmth of the welcome of this vociferous meeting," Mr. Hughes said, and the audience applauded. He added that what he had to say was to be said "good naturedly" at a time that the American people were taking stock.

"I do not desire in anything I say to express anger, but the highest respect for those who do not agree with me," he continued. "I simply desire to say what I think, why I think it, why I am here and then let the American people judge according to their own convictions."

The crowd applauded, and Mr. Hughes outlined his views on American industry, the test it will face when the war ends, and the doctrine of protective tariff. He was interrupted frequently by applause and now and then by cheers for Wilson. More applause greeted his reference to labor legislation enacted during his term as governor of New York.

"Now our opponents do not believe in the doctrine of a protective tariff," he said, producing a memorandum from his pocket. He checked a Wilson cheer by adding: "I am not going to say anything unpleasant, my friends. I am just going to read the democratic platform." He read the tariff plank of the platform of 1912.

"I believe," he continued, "in protecting American industry. In protecting the man who can do it is Woodrow Wilson," he shouted a man from the balcony. Applause checked the nominee.

"There would not be much disposition to clap," Mr. Hughes said, smiling, as the applause died down. "In this country if that doctrine got headway very long."

Mr. Hughes declared that "Nobody would put over anything for private gain at the public expense" in the tariff if he could help it and was given prolonged applause. The nominee then assailed the administration for its policy toward Mexico. He outlined its attitude toward Huerta, declaring that the question was not one of recognition or non-recognition, but one of protecting American rights.

Asked About Huerta.

"You would have recognized that assassin wouldn't you?" shouted a man from the audience.

"Now I did not say that," Mr. Hughes started to reply. The rest of his answer was lost in the tumult which followed. "What would you have done?" shouted another man as the noise subsided.

"I would have protected American rights," the nominee responded, pointing his finger at the questioner. The audience rose to its feet and applauded loudly.

It was the last of the heckling, although there were other outbursts of cheering for President Wilson. The rest of Mr. Hughes' speech was devoted to a discussion of efficiency of government.

The nominee's address tonight ended his political activities of the day. He visited Nashville this morning to find a program different from the one he thought he would face in that it provided for a review of the

ALL SUBMARINES ARE NOT WARSHIPS

United States Refuses to Subscribe to New Principle Proposed by Entente.

STRUCTURE IS STANDARD

Washington, Sept. 5.—To the proposal of the entente allies that neutrals accept the principle that all submarines are vessels of war, the United States has dispatched a reply which, it is understood, holds to the principle that the characteristics of each submersible must govern the case.

At the same time advices to some of the diplomats here today announced that Norway, Sweden and Spain had forbidden their harbors to merchant submarines on the ground that they were "indistinguishable" from war craft.

The memorandum from the allies was sent to all neutral powers. The reply of the United States, it was stated, was also in the form of a memorandum and not a formal note. Copies were sent to each of the entente allies.

To the contention in the allied memorandum that it is difficult, if not impossible for warships to distinguish between armed and merchant submarines, the American reply is understood to point out that it is equally difficult to distinguish between sailing merchant vessels which may have masked batteries.

President Will Be Away from Capital For Over a Month

Washington, Sept. 5.—President Wilson returned here at 2:05 o'clock this afternoon from Hoganville, Ky. He was driven immediately to the White House. The president will remain there until Friday, when he goes to Atlantic City, N. J., to address the National War Labor Exchange association. Then he will motor to Long Branch, N. J., and does not expect to return to Washington for more than a month.

The cheering of the large crowds at every station through which the president passed caused him to smile broadly and shake hands with as many as possible. "I never received such receptions," he remarked.

After the Atlantic City speech the president has no engagements before September 20, when he goes to St. Louis. During his stay at Long Branch, N. J., however, he will see many delegations and write several political letters.

Remains of Woman and Child Found

Stella, Neb., Sept. 5.—(Special.)—While excavating a cellar at the home of Arthur Williams in the Prairie Union neighborhood, the bones of a woman and a child were unearthed about five feet under ground. The child was probably 4 years old and the woman was five feet in height.

The box containing the remains had decayed, only a few little pieces of wood being left. In the bottom of the box was a piece of newspaper, the only word which could be deciphered was "sasaparilla." Besides the paper, a flint rock, shell of a peach seed, pieces of red and gray hair—the red belonging to the child and the gray to the woman. The soles and the upper part of a child's shoe were discovered, but the most definite parts were the copper tips of the soles and the locks of hair.

It is supposed that years ago, before the settlement began in this county, the woman and child had died while traveling through this section and were buried at this place. An old trail runs near where the box was found.
