By MELLIF?CIA—Sept. 7, 1916.
Rare artistic treats are in store for members of the Tuesday Morning Musical club, the winter program of which organization is announced by the chairman of the program committee, Mrs. C. M. Wilhelm. Beginning in November, noted artists will be presented on the first Tuesday of each month, the concerts to be given at the Hotel Fontennelle, most probably.

As outlined, the Russian dancers, Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukranisky, with seven women dancers, and an orchestra of twenty-five, will open the musical club's series by a brilliant entertainment. A club program, featuring Mrs. L. F. Crofoot, pianist, an active member of the organization comes next, to be followed by Julia Culp's concert. Miss Corinne Paulson, another. local pianist, will give the February program; will evening for Mr. James Dyrenforth of Goadwsky will be followed by Pable Goadwsky wi

Six Soul Stations in Life

BY ADA PATTERSON.

A little girl 3 years old tried to steal a baby. The baby's nurse looked for a policeman. The little girl's mother said: "I'll spank you hard with my slipper when we get home. The baby and the perambulator were pushed around the corner into safety. The 3-year-old was led away in a howling rage. What set the bystanders agrin and aroar was a soul station in the life journey of that little girl.

There are six main soul stations in the journey of life. Way stations, switch stops, changing of cars—yes, there are all of these. But when you plan a journey you think only of the chief stops. The first is the discovery that you are not the center of the universe.

Every person is amazed to learn that the world does not revolve around him. The discovery comes earlier to some than to others. It may be the lesson scholmaster Shakes—peare taught when he made Titania fall in love with an ass's head in "Midssummer Night's Dream." Mark Twain told of this soul station of Eve's in "mond of Adam." she scribbles with a tree twig dipped in rose stain. "He isn't even good tempered. I suppose I love him because he is male and he is mine."

We have lived and journeyed long before the meaning of the next soul station is clear to us. We have heard as often as we have sat at table, "Mind your own affairs. Let other people look after theirs." We have been brought upon the platform of "Me and my wife, my son, John, and his wife." And all others may lose themselves in sheol. Women have been told that their place is the home until only the boldest and bravest of them doubted it. The governor of the mount of the god or goddess there is revealed a commonplace creature. That may be the lesson schoolmaster Shakes—peare taught when he made Titania fall in love with an ass's head in "Midssummer Night's Dream." If do the journey of the lesson soul station of Eve's in "Midssummer Night's Dream." If do the journey of life the lesson soul station of Eve's in mond of Adam."
