The Busy Bees : : Their Own Page

OFTEN times little Busy Bees hear their elders speaking of some one's particular hobby. Well, every little boy and girl knows what a certain kind of hobby is—a hobby-horse on which to ride, or rather, imagine you are riding. But when one speaks of a grown person's hobby, a different thing is meant. This kind of a hobby is something which persons pursue with great delight. Boys and girls have their own particular hobbies, even though they are not always credited with such. Any pastime you prefer above all others, anything you like best to do, is your hobby. Some little boys collect stamps or coins, or postal card pictures; many little girls are given to saving scraps of silks and satins and the like for a "crazy quilt" and oh, there are a hundred and one things that little folks do which might be called their hobby. This week, a new special prize contest is announced. You are to write on "My Hobby." Tell what your hobby is, how you came to be interested in it and how much pleasure you derive from its pursuit. The contest will continue throughout the month of October, the prize winner to be announced the last Sunday in October. Lucille John of the Blue side, won the prize book this week. Luella Gibson and Dorothy Gray, also of the Blue side, were awarded honorable mention.

Little Stories by Little Folk

(Prize Story.)
Visits State Fair.
By Lucille John, Aged 10 Years, Elmwood, Neb., Route 1, Blue Side.

A state fair is held at Lincoln every year the first week in September. As our school did not start until a week later we all went. After reaching the fair grounds we ate our dinner and then went to see the displays. In the Art building there were all kinds of beautiful fancy work. Some of the things were tatted and crocheted doilies, handkerchiefs, handbags, yokes and many different kinds of quilts. Next, we went through the Agriculture building. First we saw fruits, vegetables and grains from all countries of Nebraska, and also some from Canada. Then, on the second floor, we saw writings, drawings, paintings and all kinds of fancy work from country schools in Nebraska. This was all very beautiful. There was some of the nicest bead work made by the blind. These things were all very interesting. In another building in a booth there was fancy work made by the feeble-minded. In University building there were two miniature schools; one was an old-fashioned building, the other was a new consolidated building, with a high school and many rooms. Then we went through the horse and cattle barns. We saw the sheep, poultry and fish. By the side of the Fishery building there was a pond, where geese and swans were enjoying themselves. So many people complain about the frosts and cold weather, but do not scold me for I am trying to do my very best. It is not my fault, but the one who leads me. We should be prepared for all things, and then it would not be so hard for us. We must look ahead and not back in all things, and I think that the people would be better off, if we do not feel when we ought to, then we feel pretty badly after it. I hope it will teach some boys and girls a lesson.

down and took them off. But as soon as they were off they went trip-trap, trip-trap to the head of the class. "See," said the teacher, "the fairy shoes will stay there till you work up to them." Every day the shoes were there at the head of the class. Tommy had to stand in his bare feet till he could work his way up to them. Now you must not think that Tommy was a bad boy. He loved flowers; he loved books; he loved all things fair and beautiful. He wished to do right, but he would forget. The fairy shoes helped him to think. They would not let him forget. By and by he did so well that he could wear them again. At last he learned to be always in the right place at the right time.

The Doll That Talked.
By Hildur Lundberg, Aged 11 Years, Wakefield, Neb., Blue Side.

I am a new member and would like to join the Blue side. Here is a little story I thought I would write. "Evelyn Ann, are you sleepy?" asked Dollikens. Evelyn Ann did not answer, but went on smiling with her red wax lips. Dollikens gave her a little shake. "Dear me," she said, "I do wish you could talk. I am so tired of having a doll that never can answer, no matter how much I say to her. It is very stupid of you, Evelyn Ann. There, go to sleep."

Dollikens turned her back to Evelyn Ann and went to sleep herself. Then she began to dream. She thought Evelyn Ann sat up in her crib and opened her blue eyes wide. "Mamma," she said.

"Mamma, my pillow is not at all soft."

And he ran to school as happy as he could be. But the very next morning Tommy was careless again. The butter by the road was yellow with butter-cups. "How pretty they are," he said to himself. "Wonder if I may dare to get one. Yes, I will have one." He laid his books down and ran into the field. His shoes began to pinch his feet, but he did not care. The ground was soft and wet; it would not bear him up. His feet sank in the mud and he lost his fairy shoes.

Well, I'm glad they are gone," he said. There were so many buttercups, and he wanted them all, so he picked till his hands were full of them.

At last, with bare feet, he went on to school, but he was very late. All the other children were in their places. And there, too, were Tommy's shoes, right where he ought to be. The shoes were very muddy, and each had a little buttercup in it.

"Well, Tommy, you are late again," said the teacher. "Put on your shoes."

Tommy put them on. Then he had to go to the foot of the class. He did not know his lessons. The shoes pinched his feet. He was not at all happy.

"I think I'll take them off. They hurt me so," he said. So he stooped
