KENNEDY TALKS AT LEXINGTON

Republican Candidate for Senator Discusses Questions of the Day.

HE SCORES THE DEMOCRATS STATE WINS DAKOTA CASE

Lexington, Neb., Oct. 1 .- (Special.) -John L. Kennedy of Omaha, republican candidate for United States senator, in a meeting in Aubel's hall here suggested means and ways of improving on the democratic administration of the last four years. He was intro-duced by Fred L. Temple, chairman of the republican county central com-

A positive plan for the solution of the Mexican problem by giving up quarreling with bandits and bandits chieftains, and giving some attention to the needs of the great mass of the Mexican people, was suggested by Mr. Kennedy. He proposed a plan of national defense which wou'd not require monster navies nor large standing armies, which he would work out by developing an effective citizen soldiery, not an army, but the makings of an army.

He also talked good roads and recommended that the state vote an appropriation to match the appropriation of the United States for the purpose of roads. Mr. Kennedy also discussed the matter of distributing the immigrant population. The Underwood tariff Mr. Kennedy asserted to be a bit of sectional legislation. He told how this law protects the prode be a bit of sectional legislation. He told how this law protects the products of the southern farms, but does not protect the products of the farms of Nebraska. Keith County Fair Will Open Tuesday

Will Open Tuesday
Ogallala, Neb., Oct. I.—(Special.)
—The final touches are being put on the fair grounds and all is in readiness for the largest and most successful fair ever staged by the Keith County Fair association. New horse, hog, and cattle barns have been added to the list of buildings already on the grounds, giving the stock department considerable more room, but which yet appear to be too small for the large number of entries, and at the bresent its seems imperative that additional ones be built next season.

The racing program, the most elaborate yet attempted, is well filled, and as the track is conceeded to be the fastest in western Nebraska, some good racing is promised. A number of exhibits have already arrived, and every available space will be taken. In addition to this, Keith county is one of the fortunate counties in the state, receiving the exhibit from the state farm at Lincoln this year, and while this does not enter in competition with the local exhibitors, it gives the public some valuable information in crop production, that would cost considerable to each and every one, if it was handled in any other way. The fair opens October 3, as entry day, and on the 4-5-6th the racing program is carried out.

Application of the St. Joseph & Grand Island Railway company for an order to restrain the State Railway commission of Nebraska from refusing to receive and file freight tariffs ordered by the Interstate Commerce commission, was denied on the ground that the action should be heard in the Nebraska district. October 16 was set for a hearing on the ber 16 was set for a hearing on the application at Omaha. State Court Upheld.

State Court Upheld.

The decision of the federal court tonight concedes the right of the supreme court of South Dakota to review the issues of an express rate case, which involves the power of state control over interstate transportation rates. On petition of Attorney General C. C. Caldwell and the State Board of Railroad commissioners, the South Dakota supreme court on September 12 issued an order for the express companies to show cause on October 2 why an injunction should not be issued restraining them from making effective an increased rate schedule order by the Interstate Commerce commission to go into effect on September 15. The order was accompanied by a temporary injunction restraining the express companies from making effective the new schedule.

State Court Wins.

Attorneys for the express companies today petitioned the federal court for a temporary injunction restraining the attorney general and the board of railroad commissioners from prosecuting the suit in the state supreme court. The petition was denied under Section 265 of the judicial code, which provides that no United States court shall stay proceedings in state courts except in cases relating to bankruptcy.

Industrial Parade.

The industrial parade, scheduled for October 3, Tuesday, is to contain no less than thirty floats and groups, depicting figuratively and by illustration Omaha's principal industries.

The National Swine show, which is to open in the big barns on the South Side, today, and continue through until Saturday, is another big feature which will bring thousands to the city. While not belonging strictly to Ak-Sar-Ben's festivities, this show, nevertheless, was scheduled for this time, in order that the crowds attending the one might also have the pleasure of attending the other at one and the same time. This is the first national swine show held "And with this he started in to name the many things which Mr. Wilson might have done, and might have not done, to add to the comforts of American people during the past two years, and there were a lot of them. Anyhow he didn't finish before our train reached Omaha and we had to alight. My democratic friend, Henry Richmond, was in the compartment until the tariff was raised. Then he flew. He told me afterward, in all confidence, which I violate with fear and trembling, that he had never known anything about the tariff and he was afraid he might learn there. Henry isn't unlike most democrats in this respect. They all show little aptitude in this direction.

not really provide an eight-hour day, but was merely an attempt to raise wages. He added, however, that the farmers had always had their eight-hour day. That is, he said, they have had eight hours in the forenoon and eight hours in the afternoon of each day. The farmers realize that they have been neglected by the democratic administration, because the administration knew that the war would keep prices up and prevent muc-hof the calamity cry from going up until the war, and that in the meantime the democratic party would be in power for another four years. They are going to fool the democrats on this. If my observation is accurate there is among the farmers much dissatisfaction with the manner in which the last congress has apful the office of president of the United States of America no matter who is occuping the presidential chair, but the remark of a traveling salesman made a day or two ago in the smoking compartment of a parlor car where he was surrounded by a jabbering, smoking mass of argument, struck me as full of wisdom. He said, "Do you boys know we've been taking President Wilson too seriously. The democratic press of this country has almost got us to the point of believing that our constitutional right as traveling salesmen to examine critically any public officer. They have been spending columns and and his conduct no longer exists. Columns of matter every day lauding Mr. Wilson and as much space crying scold, scold, to any one whothinks of finding fault or offering any suggestion as to how things might have been done otherwise. Now, for my part, I'm not much of a heroworshipper and I don't propose to have my rights circumscribed just because the democratic press and the part of the union to disintegrate because of the surrender of the con-trol of the government to the men of the south now in congress.

Some time ago we were campaigning out in the jack rabbit country in the western part of the state; where because of the long jumps and the numerous speeches for which Mr. Kennedy was scheduled it was necessary to do much driving at night. One night, out driver, Frank McHenry, a skilled auto pilot of the plains, was driving us along at a fancy clip, and it was then the rabbit came. He was a jack rabbit, too, and a big one, and he resembled strikingly, a diminutive jackass. When I first observed him it occurred to me how well he symbolized Nebraska democracy in minature.

After speaking of the nepotism of the last democratic administration, and after stating that a vast number of offices had been created and the rules of the civil service grossly violated to enable the last administration to put demo-crats in office, from high offices down crats in office, from high offices down to very low ones, he announced: "I had always assumed that a public office is a public trust, but after noting the conduct of the democratic administration for the last four years, I am beginning to believe that it is merely a private snap."

Too Much Indifference.

Mr. Kennedy remarked that it was noticeable that there is indifference on the part of the voters at this time, due to the unnatural prosperity caused by the war, but that the voters knew that prosperity is not due to legislation of the democratic congress. When he mentioned the fact of the reunion of the progressive and republican parties of two years ago, and said that they had always been together on principle, but apart on candidates, he was roundly applauded, and again when he observed that Charles E. Hughes is the candidate of all the party and not a factional candidate.
