Quivera's crown jewels, the magni-

Ale-Sar-Ben XXII, are now in the custody of C. B. Brown, royal guardian of the jewels, and are on displaying the window, attracting hosts of admiring crowds.

A truly royal collection is this of gliftering, sparking, effulgent attributes to kingly power. Three thousand rainestones wrought in solid silver are included in the queen's ontain, while half that number of stones, set in a gold plated crown and cepter, make up the kingly visible takens of power. Cloth of gold forms the top of the king's crown. The queen's jewels include the coronet, two bracelets, a necklace, a wonderful girdle reminiscent of medieval lays, and a heavily jeweled scepter. This is the first year a complete set of jewels has been provided for Akwar-Ben's wearers of the purple. They are the property of the board of governors, and were manufactured to order by the same jewelers who made the crown jewels for King Rex of the Mardi Gras carnival at New Orleans.

Touching on Secret of Heredity

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

One of the greatest scientific advances of the present time, a thing that every intelligent person ought to know something about, is the biological principle called Mendelism, which characters or are really hybrids, and crosses were formed between "tall" peas, as one parent, and "dwarf" peas as the other. The first generation of descendants were all tall. Externally they all resembled their tall parent alone, though some were male and other female.

But when they, in turn, without any jurther crossing, produced descendants, the second generation came out in the proportion of three talls to one dwarf. It will be observed that the distinguishing character of one of the original parents, viz., dwarfness, which had been lost to sight in the first generation, had now come out again in the second, though numerically only in the ratio of one to three.

As aluminum cannot be produced profitably under present quotations except with the use of immense power plants, many of the day-dreamers in South Dakota naturally associate the bauxite finds with the power possibilities of Big Bend and Little Bend, on the Missourj river. If either of these water power projects could be developed the refining of aluminum could be undertaken on a large scale in South Dakota.

Aside from the alleged find in South Dakota, the only known aluminum deposits in the United States are in Georgia, Arkansas and Arizona. The first bauxite discoveries were made at Baux, France, and this town give the

New Spirit and the Clubs

New Spirit and the Clubs

By WOODS HUTCHINSON, M. D.
When women's clubs first began to ask the why of our modern civic ughness and diff they appointed a committee upon beautifying the city and another upon civic betterment, and these duly waited upon the mayor and city council and leading business muc. They were received politely, with more or less concealed amusement, and graciously granted permission to plant flowers around the bandstand and shrubs along the walks of the city square, or try to get a little grass to grow, in spite of soot and dogs and litter and cigar stubs, upon some of the open spaces down town, or along the parkings of the sidewalk coming up from the depot. They were even inavorably listened to when they urged larger grounds and a timer building for the new high school, because it would be a good advertisement for the town and attract desirable new citizens to settle there.

But their timid requests for nore ambitious and radical improvements, such as well-paved side streets and clean alleys and playgroungla and housing reform and citizens to settle there.

But their timid requests for nore ambitious and radical improvements, such as well-paved side streets and clean alleys and playgroungla and housing reform and factory sanitation were met by stern retusals, not unmixed with indignation. All those things cost money, and money meant taxes and burdens and restrictions upon big business. And if big business was too heavily loaded or restricted it couldn't run at a profit, and if shops couldn't run at a profit and if shops couldn't run at a profit, and if shops couldn't run at a profit my development of the women's clubs of America. They still was necessary for progress that two would lose trade and the town would begin to run to seed. A town that was growing always had to be dirty, and it was necessary for progress that two-thirds of the community should work hard and live in poor houses on dirty streets in order that the other third could live in nice houses on clean streets. It was all a matter of business and women didn't understand business anyway, and they ought to know when they were well off and be satisfied to let well enough alone and leave all that sort of questions to men. But this answer didn't satisfy the women a little bit, nor did its logic convince them, although they were compelled to accept it for the time being. They talked the matter over among themselves again and calmly decided that if this was business then business had to be made over again and must defiferent Men might be able to stand different Men might be able to stand different Men might be able to stand to be made over again and made different and music as enthusiatically and far more thoroughly and effectively than before, but their great tield of enthusiasm and interest lies in doing everything to make the city, the state and the world a heather.

Suffered 17 Years

Mrs, Nellie B. Vanarsdell, of Mackville, Ky., reports an interesting case of how she had suffered from bowel trouble since childhood. She says: "I have had four opinions for my trouble and there was nothing would do me any good or give me any relief but Thedford's Black-Draught. I suffered 17 years straight until I got to using your . . . medicine." This long standing trouble was re-lieved, after other treatments falled, by the use of Thedford's Biack-Draught, a purely vegetable preparation, made of ground roots and herbs. For over 70 years Black-Draught has helped people who have suffered from constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headache, etc. It may be just the medicine you need. Try it.
