Through the streets lined with cheering crowds the procession went directly to the Commercial club.

There the rest of the reception committee were waiting. The president and Mrs. Wilson were introduced to them. The reception committee members then joined the other guests in the dining room. The president and Mrs. Wilson entered last.

Members of the reception committee met at the Fontenelle hotel in the morning and there received their instructions from Mr. Wattles. It was at the express wish of the president that only four met him at the station. The others went from the Fontenelle hotel to the Commercial club.

The president's train is an all steel train made up of baggage car, business car, diner, Pullman for the newspaper men and other members of the party and the president's private car, "Superb," for the president and Mrs. Wilson, Secretary Tumulty and other members of the immediate party.

Several railroad officials accompanied the train. Emergency engines were placed along the line between Chicago and here and all freight trains were required to stop while the special passed, so that there could be no possible danger of accident.

The train stopped a few moments in Missouri Valley and in Council Bluffs. In each place the president appeared on the rear platform.

Chief Blackbird. Chief Blackbird, last reigning chief of the Omahas, was seen on the next float in a noble equestrian figure done in plaster of paris.

Man Appears. Again the icebergs were forced back by the sun, and the following group showed the appearance of man, the primitive Indians slowly migrating along the trail, with their dog trevois, for this was in the days before the Indians had horses.

Then came the Homesteaders. The homesteading by the civil war veterans following this war was represented in the next float, a representation of the sod house erected by Daniel Freeman, the first homesteader in Nebraska, near Beatrice.

STATE'S HISTORY TOLD IN PARADE OF REAL WORTH

sign, this parade was almost unwieldy in its magnitude. With thirty-one great floats of rare design and fifteen historic groups, with the platoons of police, the governors of Ak-Sar-Ben, the eighteen bands, the ten ox teams, the many groups of raw Indians from the reservation, the burros, the pack mules, the prairie schooners, the homesteaders, stage coaches, groups of hunters with flintlocks, trappers with pack horses, squads and companies of soldiers, and hundreds of horsemen in many groups, all to be arranged and wheeled into line at Sixteenth and Cumming, the wonder was that the parade ever got started at all.

Title Float. A squad of motor cycle police sputtered ahead of the parade clearing the streets. Came then the sixteen mounted police headed by Chief Dunn. The twelve governors of the Ak-Sar-Ben, followed on their horses, wearing again the customary spotless white. A band immediately behind them set the pace with lively music and a double roll of the drum, and behold! the title float appeared.

Three Miles of Parade. The history of Nebraska could not be told in a moment. It could not be represented in a tiny parade. This was a parade that unfolded its gigantic length nearly three miles along the route.

For a period of slumbering ages was covered in this masterly allegory. In the dim ages before the days of Adam there were great tropical monsters of the animal and reptile kingdom in this region, for their skeletons, petrified and fossilized, have been found in the ancient lake beds of the state. These were reconstructed from the skeletal measurements, and lived again in the parade. The ice age was represented with the tropical mammals lumbering helplessly about in the ice fields, roaring their rage and distress to the mute zenith while the avalanches of ice bore them down. The first known races of men of this territory walked again in the great pageant, with their semi-Arctic garb, and their dogs for beasts of burden.

Ox Teams and Indians. The Spanish explorers, the French trappers, the American hunters, the later Indians with their scalping knives, the homesteaders with their hardships, the soldiers of the early forts, the traders and their trading posts, the early forts and stockades, the territorial inaugural ball, and all activities that represented the high points of history in this section, passed in grand panoramic review before the admiring eyes of King Ak-Sar-Ben's subjects.

Eighteen bands enlivened the procession. Eleven of them were bands from out in the state and Iowa. Seven were Omaha bands. The eleven were the bands of Stromsburg, University of Nebraska, Wilbur, Ewing, Fairbury, Wall Lake, Ia., Clatonia, Ia., Arapahoe, Norfolk, Cambridge, Chadron, and the following seven were Omaha bands: A. O. U. W., Bohemian band, First Regiment K. of P., Omaha Drum Corps, Post Office, Finn's and A. Fairbrother's.

An allegorical figure representing history was mounted on the title float. A big boulder stood in the middle with crude carving or chiselling of the names of some of the rugged pioneers who blazed the trail through this wilderness in the decades and centuries gone by.

The tropical age was represented in the second float with tropical verdure, palms drooping their rich leaves and festoons of tropical vines swinging low, while great prehistoric monsters crawled about the side of the float or threshed their scaly tails about in the slime.

The change in the earth's axis followed, and the effect was shown in the next float, which represented the coming of the glacial age. A huge mastodon, the prehistoric elephant of the tropics, was seen floundering hopelessly beneath an avalanche of ice.

Then came the Homesteaders. The homesteading by the civil war veterans following this war was represented in the next float, a representation of the sod house erected by Daniel Freeman, the first homesteader in Nebraska, near Beatrice.

The Spanning of the Continent was a float commemorating the location of the terminus of the Union Pacific railway here by President Lincoln, showing a bust of Lincoln and a model of the first locomotive that went westward out of Omaha.

A model of the first capitol building of Nebraska that stood where the present Omaha High school stands was on the next float.

The great seal of the state of Nebraska, with the humble cabin of the pioneer in front of the seal and the handsome dwelling of the modern farmer behind it, followed.

Hardy Pioneers. Next came floats representing the hardships and privations of Nebraska's pioneers. One showed the wife and mother with her children, another group of riders, with their light saddles and their big mail pouches with which they galloped across the prairie in the early days.

Omaha appeared, a humble hamlet, with the early struggles and its troubles with the Indians. Another float represented the first territorial capitol building in facsimile. The seal of the infant territory followed, shown in another float.

The first inaugural ball was represented in another float, with real life and excitement in it. General John M. Thayer and his First Nebraska regiment was represented in another group of soldiers, dressed in the garb of the soldiers of the civil war.

PRESIDENT WILSON ACKNOWLEDGES GREETINGS OF CROWDS—President Wilson stood up in his automobile as it passed along the parade route and raised his hat from time to time in response to the cheers that greeted him from the multitudes on the streets.

France to the United States under the administration of Thomas Jefferson. The expedition of Lewis and Clark was next depicted in a float. They passed up the Missouri river in 1804 on their famous trip by water and over mountains to the Pacific northwest.

Placed Flag on Rockies. The expedition of Lieutenant Zebulon M. Pike was next represented as this hardy explorer was on his way to the west on the journey in which he discovered Pike's peak. This was in 1806, when he carried the American flag across the prairies of Nebraska and planted it in the Rockies.

The seven Astorians followed, the brave pioneers who suffered untold hardships in the deserts of the west. A fac-simile of the first trading post in Nebraska, that of Peter Sarpy near Bellevue, was next shown in a float.

Fort Atkinson was also shown in a fac-simile reproduced from accurate historic descriptions of its architecture. An emblematic float representing the Missouri compromise was next. General Fremont, the pathfinder, and his group of soldiers came next.

Then came a group representing the Mormon expedition of 1846. The freighters followed, with their ox teams. Ten ox teams in all took part in the parade, a magnificent spectacle that recalled to the old-timers the days of a half century or more ago.

Pony Express. The pony express was illustrated in another group of riders, with their light saddles and their big mail pouches with which they galloped across the prairie in the early days. Omaha appeared, a humble hamlet, with the early struggles and its troubles with the Indians.

Another float represented the first territorial capitol building in facsimile. The seal of the infant territory followed, shown in another float.

THOUSANDS OF SICK WOMEN

Helped Every Year by Common Sense Suggestions Given Free by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

For forty years women suffering from all kinds of female ills have been writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Thus they receive common sense suggestions drawn from a vast volume of experience, and thousands of sick women have been saved from untold suffering, as letters like the following clearly show:

Newark, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman. Your Sanative Wash is just the thing to overcome female weakness. I have told young mothers as well as older ones about your remedies, and what they have done for me. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, as my health was very bad when I wrote you, but now I can do my own work and have not had a sick day since I began taking your remedies. I keep the Compound and Liver Pills on hand all the time."—Mrs. Geo. Thompson, 24 Sherwood Court, Newark, Ohio.

Why don't you write for free advice? Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Devoe, Shumway and Reynolds at Nelson. Nelson, Neb., Oct. 5.—(Special.)—Three of the republican state candidates discussed political issues at a rally here Tuesday evening. Senator Shumway, for lieutenant-governor, and Senator Reynolds, for state treasurer, discussed state issues. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Robert D. Devoe, candidate for attorney-general. He handled the national issues in an able and instructive manner. He treated the tariff from a new angle and attacked the democratic administration with telling effect. Mr. Devoe is a forceful speaker.

For Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises. Here in America there is much suffering from catarrh and head noises. American people would do well to consider the method employed by the English to combat this heinous disease. Everyone knows how damp the English climate is and how dampness affects those suffering from catarrh. In England they treat catarrhal deafness and head noises as a constitutional disease and use an internal remedy for it that is really very efficacious.

Those who could scarcely hear a watch tick tell how they had their hearing restored by this English treatment to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven and eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be easily prepared at home for about 75c and is made as follows:

From your druggist obtain 1 oz. of Permin (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home, and add to it 4 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

Farmers used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to reduce the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the result it gives are usually remarkably quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form should give this recipe a trial and free themselves from this destructive disease.—Advertisement.
