Who Owns This Car? Owner Is Missing

Whether the owner of the machine was ashamed to report its loss, or whether he was glad to get rid of it, is the baffling problem the Omaha police face in trying to locate the owner of a car which was found yesterday in a cornfield near Florence. The machine was abandoned ten days ago, according to B. C. Lonergan, who found it, and after watching over it for several days, he hauled it under the shelter of his barn. Yesterday he told the police. The machine has the Nebraska license number 2291 painted on it. "I was afraid to leave it in the cornfield," said Lonergan, "for fear others might be encouraged to abandon their cars there." There has been no complaint made about the disappearance of the car, police said, after looking through the records.

Dem Idle Army as Big As Britain's War Army

BERTSCHY ARGUES FOR TUNNEL PLAN

Details Submitted to Commissioners Monday and Reasons in Support Stated.

COST ESTIMATED LESS

The proposed subway under the Missouri river will cost $912,000. The estimated cost of the proposed bridge is $1,500,000. Condemnation cost of the tunnel would be greatly lessened because Jones street, the only street running to the river, has never been vacated. City records prove this fact. A double-bore tunnel would accommodate 30 per cent more traffic than could be handled by the bridge and would greatly facilitate the handling of traffic. Also it would insure greater safety to pedestrians. The depreciation of the tunnel would be almost nothing. Its cost of upkeep would be met by the income from the sale of space for telephone, telegraph and light cables, pipes and so forth.

Faith in His Figures.

These facts are set forth by A. J. P. Bertschy, "daddy" of the tunnel, in a letter to Commissioner Manley of the Commercial club. "To those who doubt that the subway can be built for less than $1,000,000, I answer that I myself will accept the contract for its construction for $912,000 and organize a company to build it." The underwater route from Iowa to Nebraska has aroused much comment. Mr. Bertschy's confidence in the feasibility of his scheme has appealed to hundreds of Omahans. Men have offered to subscribe to a fund to build it. He has been deluged with phone calls and letters commending and censuring the plan. Clippings from The Bee, the paper which first announced the news, come to him in every mail. "Just because bridges, not tunnels, have always been built is a poor argument for Omaha's building bridges," is the pertinent introduction of the Bertschy-Manley letter.

Outlines Financial Plan.

For financing the project Mr. Bertschy proposes a bond issue, and argues:

"The street railway company, in its talk No. 2, stated that a bridge such as Omaha would require would cost $1,500,000. A tunnel such as would accommodate a greater amount of traffic, and be a more up-to-date structure, would cost less than $1,000,000. The interest on this at 4 1/2 per cent per annum would amount to $45,000. The annual general depreciation of a tunnel would be nothing. A sinking fund to retire the bonds for building a tunnel within twenty years, and why twenty years, would amount to $50,000. The care and upkeep of the tunnel would be paid for in the income from the sale of space for telephone, telegraph, light, etc., cables and pipes, so that at most the adjoining counties to a free tunnel would only have a charge of $100,000 per year to take care of with twenty-year bonds, and if these bonds ran fifty years instead of twenty, and as the tunnel will be good for future generations, there is no valid reason why they should not, the annual cost would be at most $75,000, against $187,000, as stated by the street railway company, for a bridge.

"The property valuation of Pottawattomie county, Iowa, is $74,811,748 and the assessed valuation is $18,702,937.

"The property valuation of Douglas county, Nebraska, is $257,572,225 and the assessed valuation is $51,514,445.

"If the annual taxes were increased $75,000, it would amount to less than $1 for each 160 acres.

Will Lessen Burden. "It will be readily seen that this would not be a greater burden on the citizens than toll paid on the present bridge. The toll collected from vehicles and foot passengers only will amount to nearly $70,000 per year, not including the extra fare of 5 cents paid by passengers who do not hold the monthly commutation tickets.

"I submit plans for two types of construction, one for vehicle and foot traffic and one for vehicle, foot and railway traffic. The latter is preferred because it will give an entrance to Omaha for interurban railway lines and make possible an income for use of railway subway. Even if no revenue were charged for such use of subway, the taxpayers would at least have some tangible assets to offset the $75,000 annually expended, while at present they receive nothing."

MOTHER FIGHTS BIG DOG TO SAVE SON

Plucky Woman Meets Feroocious Beast and Finally Conquers It.

FACE AND ARMS TORN

Desperately offering herself to the attack of a vicious bulldog, which clawed and bit her terribly, Mrs. Inez Hancy, wife of an employe of the Waterloo creamery, living at 6000 Sherman avenue, fought with bare hands for nearly half an hour yesterday afternoon to save the life of Vernon, her 8-year-old son, whom the ferocious animal had first attacked. She succeeded finally in choking the beast into submission and chasing it from her. Then she fainted. Police Surgeon Meyers found her, with her hands and face torn and shredded, in a pitiful condition. Little Vernon was in critical shape, too, as the result of the dog's fierce attack, and had it not been for his mother's heroic interference he would have literally been torn to pieces. Screams for Help. The dog is a big English bull, and had been kept chained in a coal shed on account of his ferocity. The Hancy home is nearly a hundred yards in any direction from the nearest neighbor. When little Vernon went out into the shed the dog leaped on him, knocking him down. The boy screamed for help, and fought with all his puny strength, but the animal was too strong and bit and tore at will. Mrs. Hancy heard the screams of her child and ran to his rescue. The dog had slipped out of his collar and growling and biting the boy when she came up. There was not a weapon handy, so she met the attack of the beast with her bare arms, and at the same time giving the boy a chance to run into the house. She screamed repeatedly for help, but her cries were unheard, and for nearly half an hour she battled in desperation for her own life, which she had risked for her loved one. Weighs Under Ninety. Mrs. Hancy is a little woman, weighing less than ninety pounds and the big dog was more than a match for her strength, but she finally tired him out and got away from him. Dr. Meyers pronounced her in critical shape, and said that the boy, too, would have a hard time before recovering from the frightful experience. Both are at their home under care of physicians. An effort of police and neighbors to find the dog proved fruitless, though the hunt continued for a long while. Police have orders to shoot it on sight. It is a massive mottled white beast, weighing about forty pounds.

Horseshoers to York For Next Convention

Hastings, Neb., Oct. 22.—(Special Telegram.)—What is declared by many of the delegates to have been the most successful state convention of the blacksmiths, horseshoers and wheelwrights of Nebraska ever held in this state came to a close last night, after York had been chosen for the next annual gathering and the old officers had been re-elected. The meeting was especially notable for the agreement on the new schedule of prices, which, it is estimated, will mean about $200,000 additional each year in the receipts of the trade. An officer explained this morning that this will just about balance the increase of materials, labor and other expenses during the last year or so. The officers re-elected are: President, G. S. Fisher, Kenesaw; vice president, J. Miller, North Bend; secretary-treasurer, C. C. Good, Auburn.

AUDUBONS START SEASON ACTIVITY

Dr. Walcott of the University of Nebraska First of List of Lecturers.

TALKS OF STATE'S BIRDS

In the wilds of New York City, it is rumored, there are still individuals who think of Omaha as a trading post, and that Indians instead of ticket scalpers are operating in the downtown district. Among the many who attended the first winter meeting of the Nebraska Audubon society, held in the public library last evening, there was more than one who at the start considered that the birds of western Nebraska consisted mainly of the game species and that the prairie land knew little of the songsters. It was the beginning of the Audubons' proposed educational campaign and Dr. Robert Walcott of the state university at Lincoln was the speaker of the evening. Dr. Walcott's subject was one with which he probably is more familiar than any other bird student in this locality, "The Birds of Western Nebraska." Those who thought the western portion of our state was scarce in the feathered optimistic know different now. A summer spent in adding new material to his store of knowledge on the subject and a collection of splendid stereoscopic slides made Dr. Walcott's address most interesting and instructive. He covered the ground thoroughly, enumerating the different birds, their habits and the particular locations in which they built their nests, and told how best to search for and find them. It was a splendid beginning for the Audubons and Dr. Walcott was greeted by a large, attentive and interested audience. Dr. Walcott strongly advocated the establishment of preserves for game birds, particularly of the web-footed variety, so that they might be unmolested in the breeding season. He stated positively that the number of game birds that breed in this state is on the increase, owing to the decrease of available grounds in neighboring states. The Nebraska Audubon society took up the question and will strive to secure the preserves. Two hundred suet boxes will be purchased by the society to be placed throughout the parks for the birds to feed from during the winter.
