

EVERY WOULD SHOW YOUTH HOW TO SHOOT

Chancellor of State University Tells What Are Needs of the School of Today.

TEACHERS GIVE IDEAS

"If I had a son of my own," said Chancellor Samuel Avery of the University of Nebraska, in addressing the convention of the Nebraska State Teachers' association this morning at the Auditorium, "I should wish him among other things to learn during his school period, following somewhat the sentiments of the ancient Persians, to speak the truth, to obey orders and to shoot straight."

The chancellor explained that there is much difference of opinion as to what extent the American school should give the future citizen an elementary knowledge of military science, or to what extent they should actually train the boy in the arts of war, but declared this would be his personal wish for his son, if he had one.

"The American schools have felt the need of a greater national life," he said. "In a word, we have all come to feel that the melting pot should be heated a little hotter and stirred more vigorously. We have all been profoundly regretful that American citizens should become violent partisans on one side or the other of the great European conflict."

Where Schools Fail. Touching the national defense situation, he said: "Even the problem of national defense falls ultimately for solution upon the schools."

The chancellor's subject was "Educational Tendencies."

"The discussion of what to teach and why is endless," he added. "The things which are intensely a matter of bread-and-butter today may become purely cultural in the next generation, and obsolete in the third. We see this progress in many human institutions with which we have to deal. Architects tell us that marble columns were suggested by the sight of trees stripped of the bark and used to support primitive buildings."

"So it is in education. Education is at first somewhat unconsciously practical, then more or less traditional and then a revolt follows to make it consciously practical. We are in the third stage today. The trend of education is more or less toward the consciously practical; perhaps I should say toward the obviously practical. Against the studies which do not seem justified by the experience of modern life, both youth and age rebel."

The speaker declared that Prescott, the historian, and Lowell, the poet, has both been failures at learning mathematics, but had succeeded in developing their special genius in spite of the stiff curriculum in the schools of their day.

To Train Girls. Mary S. Woolman of Boston, member of the executive committee of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, spoke on the training of girls and women for the trades and industries. She pointed out that there are today 9,000,000 women in the trades and industries, and she pointed to the great work women are doing in Europe today. "They are running hospitals," she said, "and driving ambulances, working long hours and showing themselves to be capable of things we have thought them physically unfit to accomplish."

She declared that in general economic pressure had called woman from the homes to the market, and that there is little reason to expect any lessening of this condition. Important industries require the skill and dexterity which women can give.

Women Needed in Industries. "It has been shown that women are needed in industry, and yet one hears continually that the training of them for it is not a serious necessity. With this I wish to take issue. The influence of the dull, unskilled and underpaid task of the untrained girl worker, the blight of over-fatigue, and the natural impulse of youth to go to the extreme of excitement as a relief, are a menace to our future."

She recommended industrial courses in the schools and evening schools for the older workers, who are unable to leave their jobs now to take day courses.

Earl Barnes of Philadelphia quoted figures to the teachers to prove this is not and never will be a young man's world as it has at times been said to be. "To do great things one must study and be prepared, and it takes time to prepare," he said. "The only people who attain greatness exclusively in youth are base ball pitchers and pugilists, also a few of the lyric writers, such as Shelley and Keats."

The speaker named a lot of noted men who attained greatness and leadership in the latter years of their lives. He pointed out in this connection Jefferson, Lord Fisher, Von Hindenburg, Mackensen, who are all past 60 or past 70. He said that Charles Elliott, the distinguished school man, most radical and noted books were published after he was 70. He showed by figures that the age in life when one-third of the world's great things had been done is between 60 and 70.

Agas of Man. Of 400 great men whose names were listed, he show that 4 per cent had attained greatness under 40 years of age; 10 per cent between 40 and 50 years of age; 24 per cent between 50 and 60; 35 per cent between 60 and 70; 21 per cent between 70 and 80; 6 per cent between 80 and 90.

The resolutions of the association were adopted at the close of the morning session without a fight on a single point recommended by the committee, consisting of H. K. Wolfe, A. H. Waterhouse, C. A. Fallmer, H. H. Hahn, Sarah V. Taylor and Aileen Gault.

In the resolutions the association recommended to every teacher the study of the educational creed of Dr. John Dewey; declared in favor of greatly increased appropriations for the schools for the deaf and blind and against the political vicissitudes that may render expert instructors in these schools insecure in their tenure; favors more complete recognition for the technical schools, and to this end urged greater appropriations to make increased salaries possible to the heads of departments in the state normal schools; declared in favor of having the state assume a considerable share of the burden of supporting high schools, so that every child in Nebraska should have free access to a four-year high school without burdening his home district; favored a requirement for a teacher equivalent to a four-year high school course at least; deplored the wide circulation of a report of the Russell Sage Foundation to the effect that Nebraska has dropped down to twentieth among the states in the union educationally; wished the statement either confirmed or denied by an investigation; and declared for revised spelling as adopted by the National Educational association.

Better Films Will Be Urged Before The Woman's Club

"Better films for children" is the slogan of Miss Mary Gray Peck, who speaks at the Omaha Woman's club Monday afternoon. Miss Peck represents the "Better Films" committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and has been touring the country to promote this work. She was formerly chairman of the drama section for the big woman's organization.

Club women, parents and teachers all over the United States have been addressed by Miss Peck. While better films in general is the aim, special programs for children are urged by her.

Saturday morning programs for Omaha children is the plan of the Woman's club education committee, headed by Mrs. W. S. Knight, who is bringing Miss Peck to Omaha. "Better films" was the recommendation of Mrs. E. M. Syfer, the president, in her annual address at the opening of the club season.

Chases Wife With Butcher Knife and Then Takes Poison

James Cottrell, 2610 D street, South Side, chased his wife out of the house with a butcher knife and later, as Deputies Hogan and Flynn were about to place him under arrest, calmly swallowed arsenic. Prompt application of the stomach pump and the use of powerful emetics will probably save Cottrell's life.

Thursday Mrs. Cottrell filed charges against her husband and the county attorney straightway detailed the deputies to get him. As they neared the home Friday, Mrs. Cottrell ran screaming out of the house. Cottrell followed, flourishing the butcher knife. As he saw the officers Cottrell pulled from his pants pocket a folded paper and quickly swallowed the contents.

Mrs. Cottrell says her husband often threatened to kill himself and her.

Clearing House for Puppy Love Closing

The campaign waged by the post-office to cut down the number of general delivery letters has already resulted in a reduction of 50 per cent, according to Postmaster Fanning. Persons who have been in the habit of having their mail sent to the general delivery office for years have been notified that they must have their correspondence addressed to their homes or place of business. Failure to comply with this request is met by the postoffice officials with returning the mail to the sender or dead-heading it to the dead letter office at Washington.

The new ruling is aimed at the young people who have been using the department to correspond with one another without the consent or knowledge of their parents.

Peace Doesn't Live In Sullivan Home

After many years of married life the household of Patrick and Bridget became a troubled one, according to divorce proceedings started by the latter. Bridget Sullivan wants a divorce from Patrick Sullivan on grounds of cruelty. She charges that Pat threatened her with a razor and with a revolver.

Nonsupport is charged by two spouses in petitions for divorce filed with the clerk of the district court. Lillie Williams would be freed from Charles E. Williams.

D. A. R. Gives Flag To Riverview Home

The Major Isaac Sadler chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution presented a wool bunting flag to the Riverview detention home at 2:30. Not even the government now uses wool in the manufacture of flags. Its size is six by eight feet. On behalf of the chapter Mrs. William Archibald Smith told of the evolution of the flag. Miss Ruth Ganson sang "Your Flag and My Flag," and, for the Home, Superintendent Thompson accepted the flag.

Former Omaha Woman Dies On Governor's Island

Omaha friends have just learned of the death of Mrs. Caroline Montgomery Thompson, who made her home with her daughter and Major Carl F. Hartmann, when Major Hartmann was stationed at Fort Omaha. Mrs. Thompson, with her daughter, Mrs. Hartmann, was prominent in the social life of Omaha and gave untiring service in the days following the tornado. She was an active member of Trinity cathedral and a frequent delegate to the Daughters of American Revolution conferences at Washington.

Funeral services for Mrs. Thompson were held from the chapel of St. Cornelius the Centurion on Governor's Island in New York harbor, where Major Hartmann is now in command. Another daughter, Mrs. Perry Tiffany of Paris, survives.
