Hard Times Ahead. The adored daughter was sad. "Father," she said, "what has come over you? Since I can remember I never had a wish you were not anxious to gratify, and you even anticipated my wants and handed me money for all sorts of things that I hadn't even thought of. But now I have to ask you for every cent I need, and you growl and grunt and ask if I think you are made of money, and you rail at a woman's extravagance and invariably ask me what on earth I did with that last check of dollar or half dollar you gave me. It is very strange. Don't you love me any more, father?"

Ducky Holmes Has Something to Say

"I wish to state for the benefit of the amateur football fans of Omaha, that the Class B championship could not be decided by a game between the Athletics and Nonpareil Reserves, because the Athletics is a Class A team this season, and the Nonpareil Reserves lost to the Ducky Holmes team by a score of 20 to 0, thereby eliminating both teams, and giving the Ducky Holmes team the undisputed championship, they not losing a game and only playing one tie game, 0 to 0, with the Athletics. We defeated the Fontenelles, 19 to 6; Dundee Woolen Mills, 13 to 7; Nonpareil Reserves, 20 to 0, and the Mazdas, 20 to 0. GUS KIMMEL, "Manager Ducky Holmes."

ROMANCE OF 'HOGAN'S FLOP'

Famous Haunt of the Down-and-Outs Run by Former Prize Fighter. As a relief to the frequent plaintive recital of political flops, so lamentable in some instances as to bring about, as in the civil war, the separation of brother from brother, one is delighted to read of another kind. This is Hogan's "flop," the word carrying with it the thought of throwing yourself with small preparatory measures on any place of rest that can be obtained. Ben Hogan, who established it in Chicago many years ago, is dead. But the flop remains. Outcasts can still find a bed at Hogan's shelter for 2 cents a night—payable strictly in advance—and soup to repletion at a price a shade below cost. The fact that Hogan was a prize fighter before his conversion may have had something to do with his methods afterward. Prize fighters are not without acquaintance with battered humanity. In fact, if the blows are received in fair fight, even a knockout becomes honorable. Moreover, men of his following deal with individuals rather than with theories. Consequently when Hogan was converted he went after men. Theology may have lost an able dissector, but the down-and-outers gained. "I learned there was more to serving mankind than by giving hungry men words," Hogan once said; "that is the reason I started the soup mission and the flop."

No one can ever know the good that Hogan did. Somewhere, doubtless, in the line the soup and the "flop" made all the difference. In his "Pasha of Many Tales" Captain Marryat tells of the Arab merchant, about to perish in the sands of the Sahara, saved by the crust of bread his little child had thrust into his pocket on leaving home. Crises of no less moment may occur in the streets of great cities. Hogan helped unfortunates and at the same time protected that greatest of all their remaining possessions, self-respect. The 2 cents may be forthcoming. Even if it were "panhandle" there was merit in giving it up to Hogan, demanding in return the right to "flop" as the result of an honorable transaction carried on between man and man.—Washington Post.

Furred Bear More Than Man. Harry H. Fleming reports having seen recently a big moose pursued by a bear. While fishing with a companion in Fayette lake a large bull moose suddenly emerged from the timber, ran down to the beach and into the water. Fleming after the moose was a large black bear. The bear seeing the moose fled back to the timber. The moose left the water, shook himself, blew the water from his nostrils and stood for a short time only a few yards from the usually large body and a magnificent set of horns. He walked a mile along the shore, then vanished in the woods.—Cheyenne Tribune.

CLERK WHO REFUSED CROWN

American Lad Becomes a Demigod in Eyes of Half a Dozen Republics

One American could have a crown for the asking. He is the uncrowned king of the tropics, the Cecil Rhodes of Central America, a demigod in the eyes of half a dozen republics. There sits daily in an unpretentious office at Battery place, New York, a silent Hercules who is transforming the American tropics from a jungle to a fruit garden, who is creating prosperity, health and peace where only poverty, disease and revolutions formerly lurked, who is busily steeling rail linking Central American republics to one another as a necessary preliminary to their union into one powerful commonwealth and who, also, is plodding to make it possible to travel from New York, Chicago or San Francisco all the way by rail to Panama or even to Rio Janeiro. Minor C. Keith was a Brooklyn lad who, at 16, started in a men's furnishing store on Broadway, New York, at $3 a week, didn't care for selling collars, socks and neckties and quit in six months to become a lumber surveyor. He made $3,000 in the first year and then went into the lumber business on his own account, his father having followed that industry.

Before old enough to vote he was raising cattle on a bleak, uninhabited island called Padre Isal and (as long as Rio Grande) near the mouth of the Rio Grande. He had looked over the country after the civil war and decided to settle on this forsaken territory. Only one other family lived on the island. Here young Keith trained for the battle of life, under rough, nerve-straining circumstances, with two revolvers never unhitched from his belt and with cattle thieves and other care-free gentlemen all about him when he crossed to Texas and the Mexican border to buy cattle. He rose at 4 every morning, roughed it for sixteen hours daily, often slept outside—and prospered.

He reared and bought cattle all over the surrounding territory to kill for their hide and tallow. The beef, not worth anything in Texas in those days, was fed to swine! He amassed a herd of 4,000 stock cattle and 2,000 pigs. Stock cattle were then worth $2.50 to $3 and steers brought $1 for each year of their age. (Today, alas! we city folk pay 35 cents a pound for the choicest parts of such steers!) Then something happened to change the course of Keith's career. His uncle, Henry Meiggs, was the famous builder of the first railway over the Andes and of other epochal South American lines. Minor's eldest brother, Henry Meiggs Keith, had joined his uncle in Peru and had taken over a contract from his uncle to build a railroad in Costa Rica for the government. One day, in 1871, Minor received a letter from his brother asking him to come to Costa Rica.

Minor's job was to run the commissariat of the railway. His brother subsequently died and the construction of the railway was suspended through the government. Also, to make possible the money. In order to carry out his brother's undertaking he recontracted the coast line of the railway with the government. Also, to make possible the building of the mountain section for which the government had not the needed $6,000,000, he made a contract with the Costa Rica government to settle their external debt which had been defaulted for thirteen years. He proceeded to London and after many difficulties arranged a settlement of the debt and all arrears of interest, and obtained $6,000,000 for the construction of the railway.

The International Railways of South America—"The Pan-American Railway"—is not a mere paper railroad. Half of it is already built. Connection has been made on the Pacific side with the National Railways of Mexico, at the Guatemala boundary. The road runs down the Guatemala coast and then cuts clear across the continent to Puerto Barrios, on the Atlantic side; this transcontinental line is now in profitable operation; the net earnings (or profits) in the first four months of this year having been $667,545. From midcontinent the line is being built straight through the little republic of Salvador to La Union, on the Pacific. Next it will pass through Honduras and

ENGLAND MAY GO DRY

Petitions to Be Presented to Government by "Strength of Britain" Movement.

SIGNED BY THOUSANDS

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.) London, Oct. 31.—A petition is shortly to be presented to the British government by the "Strength of Britain Movement" asking that the British government follow the lead of the greatest of the allies to prohibit the sale of alcohol. This remarkable appeal has already been signed by 1,000 representatives of the brain power of the nation, including leading officers in the army and navy, directors of munitions, privy councillors, prominent men in literature, art and music, finance and industry, university and college professors, heads of public and secondary schools, prominent scientists and medical men. The memorial claims that "two grave dangers stand before the country, holding back the power of early victory and throwing a shadow over the vision of peace. One is the wasting of alcohol, the other is the imperiling of infant life. Among all the factors of weakness these confront us with terrible vividness and they lie within our own control. With the weakening power of alcohol removed our national effort against the enemy would gather increased strength; with the increased strength and more rapid supplies our losses in six campaigns would have been substantially reduced."

FACTS ARE ENUMERATED.

The following facts are given concerning the effect of alcohol: "It hinders the army, delays munitions, keeps thousands of men from war work daily, makes good workmen second rate. "Hampers the navy, delays transports, places them at the mercy of submarines, slows down repairs and congests docks. END OF 13 YEARS' SEARCH

And the Woman's Long Lost Sister Lived Only One Block Away.

A drama of heart gripping interest, laid in Europe and extending over a period of thirty years or longer, has just reached its happy climax on this side of the Atlantic in the meeting of two half-sisters, one of whom has long been searching for the other, who never knew before that such a relative existed. The principals in this drama are Mrs. Yetta Goldman, wife of a clothing manufacturer, and Mrs. William Phillips, who came here four months ago and lives with her family within a block of where the Goldmans reside in Vineland, N. J.

More than forty years ago a soldier in Russia married a pretty village maiden at Danaburg. A few years later the soldier, finding himself too poor to support a wife, divorced her. In the meantime a child was born and was named Mary. The parents of the divorced wife took her back into their home and later she married again, but the fact that the second husband was not her real father was kept studiously from little Mary. The soldier recouped his fortunes and married again. His only daughter was named Yetta. Thirteen years ago she came to America and on her departure an uncle told Yetta that perhaps she might find a sister in the new land. "Her name is Mary and she comes from Danaburg," the uncle explained as he unfolded the strange story to Yetta of her soldier father's earlier romance.

So Yetta came to America with a new incentive—to find a sister. This strange quest continued for thirteen years. Then the other day Mrs. Goldman met a new neighbor on the street. She was Mrs. Mary Phillips, who had come from Russia fourteen years ago and was the long sought sister.—Philadelphia Record.

PLANES WITH CLIPPED WINGS.

How French Aviators Learn the Flying Art on "Rollers" and "Penguins."

After I had received my preliminary instruction in the construction of Nieuport machines (fast scouting aeroplanes of French service) and the technique of handling them, I was put on a machine called the "roller" and given my first instruction in steering. The roller is simply a Nieuport whose wings have been cut down to such an extent that it will not rise, except for perhaps a foot or so in a great burst of speed. It runs almost like a motor car. By its use one develops the instinct for steering in a straight line and for turning. It is really much harder to steer a roller along the ground than to steer a real machine in the air. The contact with the earth is always twisting and turning it in the cruelest fashion. By the time one has finished his course on the roller he understands horizontal steering and knows something about the management of his engine. Perpendicular steering, which is more important, of course, comes when he is promoted to a "penguin." This is a complete machine, except that the engine is so weak as not to permit it to rise more than 25 or 30 feet. On it the student aviator practices rising and descending, and especially the art of landing. Landing is the most difficult and the most important department of aviation. Half or three-quarters of the accidents occur because the aviator has made a bad contact—American Aviator in Saturday Evening Post. Persistence is the Cardinal Virtue in Advertising.
