LARGEST CLASS IN HISTORY OF MASONS

Nebraska Sends Two Hundred Candidates for Higher Degrees of Scottish Rite.

SOVEREIGN OFFICER HERE

Two hundred candidates from out in Nebraska have come to town to be inducted into the higher degrees of Scottish Rite Masonry. The occasion is the annual fall reunion and the class at this time is the largest in the history of the order in Nebraska. The candidates come from subordinate Masonic lodges all over the state. Besides the candidates for degrees, there are not less than 150 visiting Scottish Rite Masons, most of whom have come from Nebraska and Iowa. The most prominent among the guests is Henry Alverson, sovereign inspector general of Nebraska and Iowa.

The first session of the Scottish Rite Masons at the present reunion was held at 1:30 o'clock, when degrees from the fourth to the fourteenth were conferred. Sessions will continue to and including Thursday, the reunion concluding with a banquet Thursday night.

Tuesday degrees from the fifteenth to the eighteenth, inclusive, will be conferred; Wednesday, the nineteenth to the thirtieth, and Thursday the thirty-first and thirty-second.

Labor Situation May Delay Start of New Through Train

The Missouri Pacific has lined up the equipment and about completed details for through passenger service between Omaha and New Orleans, but the uncertainty of the labor situation, as applied to railroads, is likely to postpone the starting of the trains for a time, at least.

Equipment for eight all-steel trains has been secured, and when the through Omaha-New Orleans service goes on they will be run south of Kansas City in connection with the Iron Mountain and other allied lines. The plans provided for the inauguration of the through service December 1, with one train each way daily.

McGee Denies He Was A "No Account" Husband

Hugh McGee, defendant in the divorce suit brought by his wife, Mary McGee, took the witness stand in his own behalf on the first day of the week in Judge Leslie's court and denied every allegation made by his spouse that he is a "no account" husband.

Among the charges made by Mrs. McGee last week—cruelty was one of the mildest—were those to the effect that her husband had an abnormal appetite for the contents of the little brown jug, amused himself by grabbing her by the heels and standing her on her head in a clothes closet and was grossly negligent in making donations to the family exchequer.

Hugh testified that he has always been a dutiful hubby, taking his wife's advice at all times and endeavoring daily to do little things which would add to the sum total of her happiness. He declared that ever since they were married he had given her his salary, retaining for himself only a dollar or so. As to drinking—well, Hugh admitted that his line of employment has always been of such a nature that after the day's work he needs a little stimulant, but asserted that a few glasses of beer constituted his straying from the path of the teetotaler.

OMAHA RANKS HIGH AS CITY OF HOMES

No Other City Leads Omaha as a Place Where People Own Their Own Dwellings.

THEY ARE REAL HOMES, TOO

By A. R. GROH.

"Be it ever so wumbul,
There snow play sly comb."

More people own their homes in Omaha than in any other city in the United States, according to the figures compiled by the Omaha Water board. These figures, taken from 25,049 homes using city water, show that fifty-six homes out of every 100 are owned by the people who occupy them.

The federal census of 1910 states that 39.8 per cent of the people of Omaha owned their homes then. The federal census of 1900 showed that only 25.9 per cent of Omaha people were home owners. So, you see how the people who "own their own homes" are increasing.

Back in Philadelphia, the "city of homes," they have an official booster named James Edward Cattell, a little man with Dundreary whiskers. He is always harping on what a city of homes Philly is. A "home" in Philadelphia, dear reader, is fifteen feet wide, two stories high and built right against the front sidewalk. There is no front yard. The back yard averages about eight by twelve feet and is neatly cemented.

Chance for Mixup.

The residence streets are lined with such homes, as much alike as peas in a pod. If someone sneaked along some night and changed the numbers there would be an awful mixup, for they never could tell 'em apart.

Omaha homes are real homes with yards around them and bushes and trees and a dog and a garden and a place for Johnnie's rabbits and Mary's doll playhouse and perhaps a coop for some fresh egg-layers—a reg'lar home, you know; not a cubbyhole.

And of these regular homes we seem to have more owned by their occupants than any other city in the country.

Taking the federal statistics of 1910, we find that in Omaha forty families out of every 100 owned their homes. Minneapolis and St. Paul had the same good record. In Milwaukee and Denver thirty-six out of every 100 owned their homes. In Cleveland thirty-five, in Buffalo and Baltimore thirty-four, in Indianapolis and San Francisco thirty-three.

Less in the East.

Amid the smoke of Pittsburgh twenty-eight out of every 100 don't have to pay rent. Albany, N. Y., has twenty-seven home owners out of every 100; Chicago and Louisville and dear old Philly ("city of homes," you know) have twenty-six home owners in every 100.

Boston, in spite of its "highbrow" reputation, ranks with Fall River, Mass., the factory town, both cities having only seventeen home owners in every 100.

And New York, N. Y., greatest city on earth, has only twelve home owners in every 100 of its population.

A very few cities have a higher percentage of home owners than Omaha had in 1910. Spokane had 51 per cent; Oakland, Cal., 46 per cent, and Los Angeles, 45 per cent.

It's a grand thing to live in Omaha.

Powell Criticizes Painting Bought By Friends of Art

Omaha's most expensive painting, the Jules Breton "Vintage of Pierre La Grange," valued at $10,000, is inconsistent. It does not convey the impression the artist set out to give, according to Doane Powell, president of the Omaha Art guild, and head of The Bee's art department, who talked on "The Psychology of Art" at the Philosophical society Sunday. The picture was purchased by the Friends of Art and hangs in the public library.

"The Breton painting is supposed to represent sunlight, we infer from the deep shadows, but it is painted in so low a key that it doesn't convey the impression of sunlight at all, it does not reach its fullest interpretation," said Mr. Powell.

"It isn't the name or the price of a picture that makes it more beautiful," he said.

Paintings that are temporarily pleasing and paintings that are lastingly impressive, were compared by Mr. Powell.

Fine Arts Lecturer Must Be Ubiquitous

Dr. James Parton Haney, director of art in New York City high schools, will be a busy man the three days he spends in Omaha this week. Dr. Haney is brought to Omaha by the Fine Arts society to speak at the Hotel Fontenelle Wednesday afternoon on "The Relation of Art to Home and Community Life" and Friday on "The Art of Teaching Art." Besides these, Dr. Haney will give a gallery talk at the Fine Arts exhibit Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

"Art in Harness" is the subject of a talk Dr. Haney will give Friday before the Commercial club. He will be at the speakers' table Thursday, when Lincoln Steffens is the honor guest of the club. Mrs. W. G. Ure, president of the Fine Arts society, gives a luncheon for Dr. Haney Wednesday.

Says Wife Married Him Only to Secure a Home

Beachlon W. Harris, a waiter in a hotel, has filed an answer and cross-petition to the divorce suit of his wife, Ora Lee Harris, in which he alleges that she married him only in order to get a home. He also charges misconduct. According to Harris, his wife has deserted him and gone to Pittsburgh.
