Mayor William Sievers of Cal-houn, who lives near the postoffice, heard the explosion, which was fol-lowed a few moments later by the sound of a rapidly racing auto en-gine. The car tore by his place like a streak, as he slipped into his clothes to investigate and notify the authorities. authorities.

Mayor Sievers is proprietor of the general store in Calhoun, and upon reaching his place of business found that the front door and cash register had been pried open. From the lat-ter the thieves had taken several dol-lars in small change. The safe in the store, although it bore marks showing it had been inspected, was evidently given up as a bad job by the cracks-

Entrance to the postoffice was gained by way of a rear window. The safe was not blown with nitroglycerin as in all of the recent jobs in this vicinity, but was forced by a charge of black powder. The combination was pried off and the powder placed about the tumblers and touch off with a fuse. Nothing was found in either fuse. Nothing was found in either store or postoffice that would lead to the identity of the cracksmen.
