Beautiful New Sun Theater Plans to Open Thanksgiving

Goldberg Brothers, promoters and managers of the new Sun theater, plan to hold their opening on Thanksgiving day.

giving day.

"If we open Thanksgiving day," said Samuel! Goldberg yesterday, it will surely be a real thanksgiving for us.
During the construction of this building we have had all the troubles that the ordinary individual has who ereces
a building in these days, and then some."

The Sun theater on the interior is unlike any other theater west of Detroit. It is unusual in many respects. With its 1,500 seats not one seat permits a poor or indirect view of the screen and there are no galleries. The interior is unusual in photoplay theaters in many respects. Luxuries and conveniences are present. ters in many respects. Luxuries and conveniences are present on every hand. No detail seems to have been overlooked that would add to the comfort and pleasure of the patrons. Omaha will welcome the Sun theater as an important addition to its social life.

side, George Busby, and numbers thirty people, carrying their own special scenery and electrical effects, and is one big musical treat.

"The Heart of Dixie," a comedy drama, is the offering at Boyd's theater for four days beginning Sunday, November 26. It is a story of the south and its people, of a young girl who has quarreled with the man she loves and married a hot-tempered, lawless man. In the foray of the night riders, the husband is apparently drowned and disappears. In due time the true lover presses his suit and after five years of happiness the husband returns and seeks to regain his marital right. His attempted murder of his rival is frustrated by a bullet fired by an old enemy. The company includes Doris Hardy, Ethel Wichman, Charlotte Langdon, Dorothy Hays, Catherine Campbell, Richard LaSalle, Jerome Bruner, William Friend, Peter Rossar and Lawrence Atkinson. The negro plantation hands in characteristic songs and dances add to the performance. The usual in characteristic songs and dances add to the performance.
