Opening Play at the Sun Theater is Strong, With Clara Kimball Young

First Takes the Part of an Artist and Later as a Red Cross Nurse in "The Dark Silence."

The opening play at the Sun theater Thanksgiving will be Clara Kimball Young in "The Dark Silence." Miss Young portrays two strong roles in this play. She is first an artist and later a Red Cross nurse in the trenches. In both she is appealing, fascinating and gives an excellent exhibition of artistic acting in both roles. The cast:

Mildred Clara Kimball Young
 Derwent Ainsworth Edward T. Lanford
 Dr. Mario Martinez Paul Capellani
 Sibil Ainsworth Barbary Gilroy
 Pina Jessie Lewis
 Mildred White, a pretty young American girl, studying art in Paris, is saved from a burglar's attack by Dr. Mario Martinez, a Spaniard. She doesn't understand his type, but resents and repulses his advances. She is immediately attracted to his friend, Derwent Ainsworth, a young Englishman, pursuing his vocation in Paris as a sculptor. The friendship between the two gradually develops until Derwent declares his love and asks Mildred to be his wife. They plan for an early wedding, but shortly before the auspicious day Derwent receives a message from his sister telling of the dangerous illness of his father. The message ends "come home for the sake of one who has always believed in you and loves you, Sibil." Derwent would like to wait until after the wedding but the appeal is so strong that he must go. He allows Dr. Martinez to read the letter and gives him a note to Mildred with a request that he deliver it. Jealousy on the doctor's part causes him to withhold the message to Mildred and to burn all of the note except the last few words which look suspicious. He then intercepts letters from Derwent to Mildred and leads her to believe that Derwent has gone back to a former sweetheart. He then plays on her feelings and when war is declared he persuades her to agree to go to Spain with him. Derwent returns on the day they are to start, and going to the doctor's apartment finds him ready to leave. Martinez tells him Mildred and he are going to Spain and Derwent soundly thrashes him. Derwent then joins the English army. When Mildred comes to find what is keeping the doctor she learns that Derwent has returned and still loves her. She feels that she has lost him and joins the Red Cross. On the field of battle the Germans attack with gas bombs and Derwent is blinded. In the hospital Mildred, under an assumed name, becomes his nurse and through her kindness he learns to love her even though he has never seen her. When he is able to travel he goes own way in life. Jim at first thinks the "old man" is joking—surely he doesn't mean that he, Jim, whose every wish has been gratified, must go out into the world and work for a living. But at last he realizes that his father means just that. For the first time Jim's fighting blood is aroused. So taking the last parting check from his father, he sets out with his trusted valet for a ranch in Wyoming, determined to make good, and to prove to his father and others that he is not the weakling they had believed him to be. Jim begins his career out west by beating up a native who resented intrusion of the tenderfoot, and by his splendid fighting, wins the admiration of the ranchmen and other onlookers. Jim then sets about to straighten out things. Learning that their ranch holds unpaid claims against the railroad for killing their live stock, he determines to collect all that is due them, and with this purpose, goes to see John Maynard, the president of the road. In a heated interview, he demands settlement of his claim, and when refused by the president, tells him that he is not through yet, and that some day the road will pay their claim with 100 per cent interest. President Maynard's daughters, out boating, are caught in a swift current and are in grave danger of being carried over the falls. They are rescued by Jim, who is immediately attracted by Alice, the younger daughter. rapidly develops, and before returning to her home in the east, Alice promises to marry Jim as soon as he has made good. Spurred on by her promise, Jim fights harder than ever, and his efforts are eventually crowned with success. President Maynard cannot long withhold his respect from the splendid young man who has so cleverly beaten him, and eventually he, too, joins in blessings on the young couple.

The Story:
 Jim Blake, lively young son of a millionaire, spends his hours carousing and having a good time with the boys. For a long while his every whim is indulged, but finally the elder Blake tires of his spendthrift ways and one morning, after an unusually "big" night, Jim is informed by his worthy parent that things must change—that the days of big bills—$200 a day, $300 a week, $500 a month—that from now on he must make his

Beautiful Flowers Have Sun Shining All the Time

Folks generally know that flowers, such as "mums," violets, roses and carnations, are used mostly as messengers of love, devotion and happiness, and the florist knows that his posies are more fragrant and beautiful when grown with the heat of the sun's rays, then Hess & Swoboda expect that with the "Sun" shining from directly across the street into their windows, their array of flowers will be more beautiful than ever.

back home and Mildred accompanies him because he asks it and because his sister, Sibil, has come and she finds out that the loving message was from his sister. At the home place in England Derwent proposes to his nurse and she accepts him and the marriage takes place. Dr. Martinez has become a great surgeon and when Derwent's sister, Sibil, appeals to him he comes to see him and agrees to take the small chance there is and operate on his eyes to remove a pressure. He is surprised to find Mildred at the house when he arrives. Mildred in turn is afraid that when the operation is performed, if successful, her husband will recognize the deception and turn from her. However, she begs the doctor to perform the operation. Anxiously awaiting the outcome of the operation Mildred prepares to leave the house as soon as she learns her husband's sight is restored. Dr. Martinez, fully repentant, tells Derwent the whole truth, that Mildred is innocent, and that only he is to blame. Derwent goes to find Mildred and the two happily embrace.

Writers Take a Course In Memory Training

Did you ever step into a restaurant, select a varied list of dishes for your meals and then marvel how the waiter remembered every detail and brought you all that you asked for? It requires a good memory for such work and in order to better the conditions in his restaurants Mr. Welch, proprietor of a chain of popular eat shops, gave twenty of his head employees the benefit of the course in memory training by the Roth Institute expert who was recently in Omaha. By developing efficiency in his establishments Mr. Welch asserts that he can maintain the standard of his service and food even in the face of the high prices that obtain at the present time.

Megeath Stationery Co. Out of Jewelry Business

Megeath Stationery company, across the street from the Sun theater, has decided to go out of the jewelry business. In order to do this the jewelry department will be discontinued immediately and the stock sold out to make room for holiday goods.

Attraction: Clara Kimball Young in "In the Dark Silence"

THURSDAY—FRIDAY—SATURDAY

Clara Kimball Young
 — in —
"The Dark Silence"

This picture is one of unusual interest and timely action. It was directed by Albert Capellani and is released on the World Film Program. Its scenes are laid in France and the Anglo-French battlefields, and unwind a deep romance between a man and a woman strangely separated, who, after years of mental torture, come face to face with each other after a series of most trying circumstances. It is a typical Clara Kimball Young picture, and those who love the popular star will see her at her best. Not one suggestive moment in this entire play.

"ALL MAN"

In this story the title itself is suggestive of the many big things which occur in the unfolding of this wonderful and exceptional story. The name of Robert Warwick is also suggestive of big things—those he has already accomplished on the stage and on the screen, as well as those he is daily adding to his screen history. It is a story which gives an insight into the lives of the so-called "idle-rich." Being the most recent World release, it is heralded as the best also.

SUN THEATER POLICY

WE will endeavor to create always—to offer only such entertainment as will be consistent with the dignity of American manhood. The Sun is a theater for mothers, daughters, sisters and wives, where the purity of their thought will be conserved above all other things. We feel that conditions not only warrant, but demand, a theater of this character, particularly in the heart of Omaha, and the Sun management has endeavored to create an institution that will reflect credit upon our city, our state and ourselves. We have the utmost faith that our judgment will be vindicated by the results—the co-operation and patronage of the residents of Omaha and its many suburbs.
