Former Omaha Woman Once Pelted Stones At President Wilson

Mary Hawes Glover, former Omaha clubwoman, now living in New York City, recalls childhood memories of President Wilson in a letter to Mrs. C. W. Hayes, leader of the social science department, Omaha Woman's club, with which department Mrs. Glover was once affiliated.

"I went to school with Woodrow Wilson when he was 17 and I was eleven. Little did I know that when I threw stones at long, lanky Tommy Wilson that I was pelting the future president of the United States. His only brother, Joseph Wilson, played the violin the night my class graduated. The father, Rev. Joseph Wilson, was for many years pastor of our First Presbyterian church in Wilmington. My father was an intimate friend and came very near leaving the Methodist church, so strongly was he impressed with Dr. Wilson."

Mrs. Glover mentions that attending the same school was Mary Leily Kenan, widow of Henry Flagler, the multimillionaire. Mrs. Flagler married Bob Worth Bingham just a few days ago.

Ad Man Must Be Analystist as Well As a Copy Writer

Analysis is one of the most important factors for the advertising man or salesman in getting out the proper information about his product to the potential customers, according to an address made by W. R. Evans of the Bankers' Realty Investment company before the Omaha Ad club at a round table meeting at the Commercial club last night.

"Analysis of the Article" was the subject upon which he had prepared his paper. He showed that no great advertising campaign can be a success unless the advertising man has studied the product and its manufacture long and hard and has analyzed it carefully.

Kountze Memorial Pastor Gets Raise

Members of Kountze Memorial Lutheran church, at the fifty-eighth annual congregational meeting last night bowed over in surprise the Rev. Oliver D. Baltzly and Associate Pastor C. F. Koch, when they presented each with a raise in salary of $400 and $300, respectively.

In announcing the increase, high tribute was paid both Rev. Mr. Baltzly and the Rev. Mr. Koch.

According to the report of Treasurer George Gillespie, $4,200 was expended for charity during the fiscal year. Contributions to the church treasury amounted to $12,597. New officers elected were as follows: Elder, William Stevers; deacons, L. H. Robinson, C. O. Larson, Robert L. Young, George H. Gillespie, Glenn W. Smythe, Elmer Sandberg, H. P. Jensen, A. B. Detweiler and W. D. Morten.

Motor Cars Meet Head-On While Moving Swiftly

Results somewhat similar to those of an irresistible force striking an immovable object were achieved last night when C. C. Edgely, contractor, living at the Hotel Harney, driving an auto without lights at Sixteenth and Clark, butted radiators with Pat Connors, chauffeur, who was driving in an opposite direction. A complaint of reckless driving and intoxication was lodged against Connors. Edgely was arrested for driving at night without lights.

Both machines were traveling at a high rate of speed when they met, witnesses said.

Found a Quick Cure for Croup.

When a child has croup no time should be lost, and the remedy that will give the quickest relief and is pleasant and safe to take is the most desirable. Mrs. S. Cartwright, Collinsville, Ill., says: "When my child was small he was subject to croup. I found that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gave the quickest relief and that he never objected to taking it."

Great Master of Violin Again Delights Omaha Audience With Wonderful Mastery

PROGRAM OF WONDERS

By HENRIETTA M. REES.

Omaha music lovers were again thrilled and stimulated last evening by the wonderful violin playing of that master musician, Fritz Kreisler, who appeared at the Auditorium as the second number on the Omaha Retailers course. Again his warm, luscious tones filled the wide spaces of this immense building, again his inspiring rhythmic swing captivated and held the attention of the large audience, and his masterly interpretations won for him a deserved ovation. And what a great artist he is! He never exaggerates, never distorts the music, yet he puts in and through the notes, beneath the ever-tempos, a wealth of feeling and a musical genius which has won him his deserved place among the world's greatest. His playing is always sane, logical and well thought out; it is also vital, inspiring and full of sentiment. Everything is done with the same ease and assurance, from the most intricate and difficult passages to the most simple, and always with that same perfectly balanced regard for its musical worth. He excels not in any one style, but in all of them, and everything he plays glows with the magic of his individuality.

Program of Interest.

The program last night was a most interesting one. The first number included excerpts from two of the seldom heard Bach "Sonatas for Violin." These were originally written for violin alone, but the first one, the "Sonata in E major," of which he played four movements, was given with a well arranged piano accompaniment. These were played as one feels Bach would have liked to have had them, and also the "Adagio" and "Fugue" in G minor, for violin alone, with its broad sweeping lines, and its many graceful fairy-like runs, and its big brilliant fugue. The prelude of the "Sonata in E major" is remarkably beautiful with its constant passage work, and occasional broad chords and the "Gavotte," "Minuettes" and "Gigue" equally interesting, and worthy of much more frequent hearings.

The applause which greeted these Bach numbers was whole-hearted and general, and brought the artist back for repeated acknowledgments.

The brilliant and famous Concerto No. 2 in D minor, by Wieniawski, followed, in which were scintillating and dazzling climaxes, contrasted with the exquisite charm and beauty of the "Romance," preceding the gypsy-like last movement. Schubert-Kreisler's "Moment Musical" was the ensuing encore.

A group of five numbers by the old masters came next, each of value both for its intrinsic merit and for its careful interpretation—a lovely "Andantino" by Padre Martini, an effective "Minuet" by Porpora, the broadly conceived "Prelude and Allegro" by Pugnani, the dainty "Chanson Louis XIII et Pavane" by Louis Couperin, and the brilliant and glowing "Variations" by Tartini. Two encores, "Spanish Serenade" by Chaminade-Kreisler, and his own "Schon-Rosmarin," were presented at this time. The last group were all Kreisler numbers, either arrangements of lovely old gems which are made to live anew under his masterful touch, or his own compositions.

In these fascinating melodies, the warm color, rich harmonies, and strong rhythmic feeling of Kreisler the composer were all in evidence.

Rare Musical Privilege.

As one listens to them under the spell of Kreisler the virtuoso with now their broad, mellow tones, and now their airy lightness, or characteristic flavor, one feels like agreeing with the woman who said last year, "Isn't it wonderful that so fine a musician can be a composer, too?" For encores, this time were had the "Capriccio Viennois," Kreisler, and, sad as it may seem, the Dvorak "Humoresque." If we were to be allowed Dvorak, how much more would we have loved one of his "Slavonic Dances" which Kreisler has arranged, instead. But after all it was a program of such music and such playing as we only hear in the visits of this great artist, and may we look forward to many more repetitions of them.

Carl Lamson always delights by his splendid accompaniments. He never is found wanting, and brings much added enjoyment to each number by his musicianly work.
