Oh, but we are a weak-necked peo-ple when it comes to our personal comforts and luxuries. In our bright lexicon the word "self-denial" is not found. Many of us rather pride ourselves on having what we want. Money no object, you know. want. Money no object, you know. We want what we want when we want it. Thrift is rather a disgrace nowa-

Thrift is rather a disgrace nowadays. We want to be "sports." Would we pinch a nickel? I guess not. We wouldn't even pinch a dollar, even those of us who only make twelve or fifteen of them in a week. No, sir. We're sports, good spenders. Did you ever notice that the "good spenders" generally keep the milkman and the grocer and the butcher waiting the longest for their just dues and are the despair of bill collectors? The French can teach us something on this subject. The most polished people and at the same time the most thrifty people in the world are the French. Before the war they had almost twice as much money per the French. Before the war they had almost twice as much money percapita saved as we. The Frenchman will "pinch" a centime and he isn't ashamed of it. When he thinks a thing is too high he isn't afraid to say so. But he is a real "sport." When it comes to helping the less fortunate he is right there. Today, in the hour of his country's need, he is cherrfully praying the expense of the

A French housewife would no more think of throwing away a loaf of bread because it is stale than she would think of buying something that she thinks is a couple of sous too high high. We need more individuality, more "tinhorn sport" real pride and less "tinhorn sport pride which compels some men give a waiter an exorbitant tip for fear the waiter will consider him a cheap skate. The Frenchman eats a 40-cent meal and gives a 4-cent tip, a 40-cent meal and gives a 4-cent tip, for which he gets a bow and hearty thanks.

We need to cultivate the virtue of self-denial. If we think eggs are too high we ought to have the gumption to say to our appetite, "Nothing doing, old boy, till eggs get cheaper."

Then the "egg king" in Chicago would soon be lying awake nights worrying about his 1,000,000,000 eggs in cold storage. And soon he would in cold storage. And soon he would be "broke," as he deserves to be, by the wrath of a strong people, capable of the old-fashioned virtues of selfdenial and thrift.

We would be better off, physically and financially, if we cut out the high-priced foods, and cut down on the we hope the other fellow will cut down. We eat too much. We admit it and we hope the other fellow will cut down. We ought to eat more of the old-fashioned foods that are inexpensive even today. We know that and we heartily advise the other fellow to eat them. low to eat them.

But let's do it ourselves.

What's that? You really couldn't get along without your two fried eggs every morning for breakfast. Oh, very well. Go ahead. But if you haven't got the will-power to deny yourself that much, please don't kick about the price. Goes to New York On

A Spring Buying Trip In order to secure unusually early shipment of spring suits, dresses and blouses Julius Orkin is spending the two weeks before Christmas in searching the markets for advanced styles. Much merchandise for im-mediate wear will arrive at his store Shown to the Exhibitors A large number of Omaha and Council Bluffs motion picture exhibitors witnessed an advance showing of "Diana, the Huntress," a special re-lease of the Fontenelle Feature Film company, this morning at the Em-press. The picture has to do with the fable that explains the appear-ance of the two faces in the moon. It is beautifully staged, has great scenic and artistic effects and, unlike many state rights and present day features, does not deal with any of the social problems of the day.

Goes to Seek Information Of Her Family in Poland

Mile. Sophia Naistitz Naimska of Brownell Hall faculty goes to New York for the Christmas vacation to get first hand information about the condition of her family and friends in war-stricken Poland. A cousin, Sophia Naimska, who teaches at the Damrosch institute, spent last sum-mer in Poland. The Omaha Mlle. Naimska has received no word from her family since last September and she is much dis-tressed about it. She hopes to go abroad herself next summer.

SELF-DENIAL IS NEEDED

By A. R. GROH.

I can tell you how to reduce the high cost of living. Reduce it. That is the secret. It lies in yourself. The trouble is that most of our plans end in talk. Most people haven't got the will power to act, where their pampered appetites are concerned. They talk about boycotting eggs and boycotting other high-priced things. Having breathed terrible threats against the wicked food

The continue plant in the sheep division of the stock yards was scored Monday morning, when confed lambs sold at $12.80, the highest price to be paid for this class in the history of the yards. The record of previous years had already been broken early in November.

The common brands of laundry soaps, which have for years sold ten bars for a quarter, are selling nine bars for a quarter, are selling nine bars for a quarter. A dime's worth of salsoda comes in a smaller package than it did six months ago. Those age than it did six months ago. Those with the present time the totals are 130,000 head behind those of last year.

Range lambs from the wheat regions of ladab sold at a high price of $8.50.

That Child May Live T. F. Strugess, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, received from the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures a letter in which information is given that the board ordered a revision of a photoplay dealing with the subject of killing "unfits" at birth.

"units" at birth.

The revised film will show a committee of physicians passing on a case and deciding that the infant of the photoplay story shall live.

This revision is in line with expressions given by various Omaha men and women with whom Mr.

Sturgess conferred before he replied to inquiries from the national board. Lonely Grain Boat Lies In Omaha for Winter

With the river rapidly freezing over, it is likely that the Julius F. Silber will be unable to make more trips to Decatur this season. Captain Neff is lying with his boat in a little cove just south of where the hog chutes were built a block or two south of the Douglas street bridge, and watching the freezing process of the river.

He was exceedingly anxious to make at least one more trip, especially as the boat is all loaded with a cargo of merchandise for Decatur.
