The Biggest and Most Satisfactory Christmas Business We've Ever Had

VON MOLTKE said: "The time to win a battle is before you fight it." Likewise: The time to take care of great Christmas crowds is before they come.
 While you were still enjoying your summer vacation, we were planning where to place extra cashiers and wrappers, where to gain space for extra displays—and most important, were arranging for an extra force of competent salespeople.

When the great business came, a trained organization met it; the business was, and is, handled without haste or worry; the salespeople remembered the injunction—to keep pleasant—to be of the "greatest service to the greatest number" and the crowds caught this contagious good humor.

Early-in-the-day shopping, now so thoroughly established, has made Christmas buying the real pleasure it ought to be.
