

ARCHBISHOP HARTY INSTALLED BISHOP

Regal Splendor Marks Ceremonies at New Catholic Cathedral.

MANY PRELATES ASSIST

Bishop J. Henry Tihen of Lincoln. Very Rev. John Jeannette of Omaha read the address of welcome from the Omaha priests and at the very close of the ceremony the new bishop himself made a brief address.

Pays Fine Tribute.

Bishop Tihen, in his sermon, paid a most glowing tribute to the personality of the new bishop of Omaha. "Had it been left to your choice, Catholics of Omaha, to choose your own bishop, and had you known him, you would have chosen Archbishop Harty," he said. "He is a man of ability without ostentation or egotism; zeal without harshness. He never asks others to do as much as he does himself. While he carefully apportions the burdens to the shoulders of others according to their strength, he seems to take it for granted that no burden is too great for him."

"To the citizens of Omaha and Nebraska he brings the message, 'Peace.' He comes to take a part in your civic life, in your political affairs."

"Are you surprised that I say that? You might well be if I used it in a certain sense. But I do not use it in the sense that means a meddling, interfering, pernicious way, a way that is injurious to religion as to other activities."

"In that way he will not take part. He may never mention such things from the pulpit. His name may never appear as a leader in civic affairs. But he will take a part, though a silent part and a powerful part, for he stands for that principle enunciated by Christ, 'Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven.'"

"He will stand for that which is fair against that which is foul, for the noble against the ignoble. And that God who was with him in St. Louis where he won the heart of the whole people; who was with him in Manila, where he was beloved by all, that God will be with him still as he ministers here among us."

"The office of the priest is so high and sacred because it is divine that we are apt to think that individuality and personality count for nothing. And, to a certain extent, that is true. The Catholic priest and the Catholic layman and woman understood the sacredness of this high office and are so imbued with its sacredness that they are inclined to put it ahead of the man."

God Chooses Men.

"But personality has much to do with the office. God prefers to choose from among men. The first apostles were men of strong personalities. The charm of personality, the power of mentality, the sweetness of morality and the ardor of spirituality are important and these are splendidly embodied in the new bishop of Omaha."

Bishop Tihen then referred to the war in Europe. "Had we the patriotism of the world instead of the patriotism of locality there would be no world deluged in blood," he declared. "The sage declared, 'I love my family more than myself, my country more than my family, humanity more than my country and God above all.'"

Referring again to the new bishop he spoke of the aloneness that must, to a certain degree, be his.

"He will be, to some extent, 'solus in monte,' alone on the mountain," he said. "He will 'tread the winepress alone.' He will bear his burdens himself and much of the initiative of the diocese must come from him. He will be alone, yet not alone, for God is with him."

The bishop speaks clearly and distinctly with great deliberation. He stood near the front of the sanctuary, fully vested and with the crozier in his hand. He turned first to the throne, where sat Archbishop Keane, and thanked him for the honor of his presence. He thanked Bishop Hennessy and Bishop Tihen for the prominent parts which they had taken, the "illustrious and venerable members of the hierarchy, the clergy of the diocese."

"The thought of your sublime calling and the grace that God has bestowed upon you must make you continue to be men of sacrifice," he said. "You have always been a noble clergy and I give thanks to the great, good God that He has called me to minister among you."

"To the laity, whom I see here for the first time, I will say that the traditions of Omaha have strengthened me and the history of Omaha, with the name of Creighton, will be a source of light and joy to me."

Salutes Non-Catholics.

"I salute our non-Catholic friends and citizens. 'Other sheep I have which are not of this fold,' said the Master. It will be a source of the deepest joy to me to give them encouragement to show them the beauty of our faith and the wondrous power which we have in the Catholic church in the sacramental system."

He referred feelingly to his former archdiocese of Manila, "a gem of Christianity in the midst of 400,000,000 who are not Christians."

He paid a high compliment to the Catholic sisters who teach and minister in hospitals in Omaha.

A glowing tribute he paid to the late Bishop Scammon, his predecessor.

"Though he could not live to see this splendid cathedral finished," he said, "God has given him a greater joy and I know that he is today in a temple infinitely more beautiful than this. And though he is not here in the flesh I believe he is here with us in spirit."

"For myself," he finished, "I shall know nothing but Jesus Christ. I shall glory in nothing but in Jesus Christ. I shall set forth the intensity of His love, the tenderness of His sympathy and shall point out the way which, if followed, results in the greatest fruitfulness in life and a blessed hereafter."

DO YOU ONE-STEP? GIRL SOLVES A FOOT PROBLEM

Dancing is hard on the feet. After one-stepping and tangoing, your feet ache and burn, they are tender and inflamed, and a good night's sleep is generally out of the question. How now, girl, do you manage? A society girl who is a confirmed lover of dancing has found a way to enjoy all the dancing she wants without the attendant foot troubles. Here is her secret: She buys a package of Wa-Ne-Ta at the drug-store for a quarter. When she gets home she bathes her feet a few minutes in warm water, in which have been dissolved two or three tablets of this wonderful preparation. Then she goes to bed and sleeps like a healthy baby. Wa-Ne-Ta takes all the soreness, burning, sweaty unpleasantness from the feet and leaves them cool and comfortable. Wa-Ne-Ta added to the bath water is cleansing and purifying, removing impurities and banishing body odors. If your druggist hasn't Wa-Ne-Ta, send us 10 cents to cover packing and shipping charges and we will send you a sample package to your address prepaid. L. C. Landon Co., South Bend, Ind.

Poisoned Candy Sent to Two Girls Through the Mail

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—An investigation of the origin of a box of poisoned candy, sent through the mails to two young women clerks in a local grocery store, was taken up here today by the secret service department of the district attorney's office.

Miss Leona Carr turned the candy over to the authorities, saying she suspected poison, as she had been made ill a week ago by drinking milk, which, she said, her physician later found contained wood alcohol. Accompanying the candy addressed to Miss Carr and her fellow clerk, Miss Gertrude Cox, was a typewritten note which read: "With best wishes, Miss Carr, for giving information kindly on the phone, and Miss Cox's kind attention to orders. (Signed) 'A CUSTOMER.'"

Chemical analysis, representatives of the district attorney said, showed the candy to contain a deadly poison.

Graves Overcome By Gas from Stove

When Charles Overman, conductor on a south Thirteenth street car gave the signal to Lincoln Graves, motor-man, to go ahead, there was no response. Overman hastened to the forward end of the car and found Graves unconscious. He had been overcome by the carbon dioxide gas from the stove in the vestibule. Police Surgeon Meyers attended him. Graves continued at work after he was restored to consciousness.
