ALTHOUGH LAST WEEK the children whose vacation visit to their homes caused such a burst of gaiety were going back to their various schools, most of them to stay until the long summer vacations. The high school set, because it did not have to go away, has had a lease of time and has been using every available moment of this week for some form of gaiety.

Whether it is due to a revulsion of feeling on the part of society matrons, surfeited with the pleasures of the holidays, or whether it is accidental, no one knows, but the fact remains that everyone is planning to attend lectures all this week, and, for that matter, all the month.

The only large social event so far scheduled has a purpose itself, so that everything seems to be turned to serious work. The Brownell Hall benefit dance will be given at the Fontenelle Friday evening. This promises to be a gala event for the patrons of the school. The members of team No. 2, which is sponsoring the dance, with their husbands, will form a large dinner party before the dancing. Mrs. Frank Judson was in charge and her team-mates were among the most active in the recent campaign. The group will include:

- Messrs. and Mesdames—
Charles M. Wilhelm, Clement Chase,
Joseph Barker, Edward L. Burke,
A. L. Reed, Charles T. Kountze,
Waite Squier, Frank Judson.

The Metz-Mack wedding in Buffalo Wednesday is a matter of great interest to Omaha people. The ceremony will take place at Trinity cathedral, Buffalo, at 8 o'clock, and will be followed by a reception at the Twentieth Century club at 8:30. Friday saw a partial exodus of the Omaha family which is most intimately concerned, the party including Mrs. Charles Metz, Miss Gertrude Metz, Miss Marion Kuhn and the bridegroom, Mr. Philip Frederick Metz. Mr. Charles Metz and his nephew, Mr. Charles E. Metz, leave this evening to attend the ceremony. Miss Gertrude Metz will be one of the bridesmaids, as will also Miss Marion Kuhn, and Mr. Charles E. Metz will be one of the ushers. Miss Harriet Mack will be maid of honor; Mr. William H. Decker, jr., of Buffalo and Mr. Carl Fleischman Holmes of Cincinnati, the best man, and Mr. Samuel C. Vail of Chicago and Mr. Thomas V. Stillwell of New York, two of the ushers, are well known to Omaha society. Miss Mack, Mr. Decker, Mr. Holmes and Mr. Vail were members of the Ak-Saf-Ben house party at the Metz home last fall, and Mr. Stillwell was a house guest of Mr. Phil Metz last summer.

After a bridal trip to Japan the young people will come to Omaha to live and will make their home for a time with Mr. Metz's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Metz. In connection with this arrangement a pretty little story is told to the credit of Miss Gertrude Metz by her intimate friends. When the new Metz home was built last summer special apartments were provided for both Miss Gertrude and Mr. Philip. The young man's rooms were done in severe "man style" while the sister's were finished in a beautiful Italian blue and fitted with the appointments that would be appropriate for a girl.

When the question of bringing a bride to the home arose it was deemed unfitting that she should be consigned to bachelor's quarters, and so Miss Gertrude unselfishly offered to give up her beautiful apartment to the new member of the family.

Rabhranath Tagore's coming on Wednesday to give a lecture that evening at the Fontenelle is another center of interest this week. Mrs. Ure of the Fine Arts society, Miss Kate A. McHugh of the Drama League, Mrs. Sylert of the Woman's club, Superintendent Graff and Dr. Jenkins, who introduces him in the evening, are the favored few who have been asked to meet the celebrated Hindu.

Toward the end of the month and continuing through February the musical events arranged by the Tuesday Morning Musical club will revive in interest. Miss Corinne Paulson, pianist, together with the Flonzaley quartet, will be the attraction January 30, with Julia Culp, accompanied by Coenraad Bos, February 8, and Leopold Godowsky February 20.

As usual the commercial and social worlds celebrate hand-in-hand. This time the occasion has been the opening of the new First National bank, which has caused a gathering of the Kountze family from New York and Denver and points in between. Mrs. Meredith Nicholson of Indianapolis, formerly Miss Genie Kountze, will be the occasion of much entertaining this week. She will be joined on Tuesday by her husband. Monday Mrs. Nicholson is expected to attend the meeting of the Original Monday Bridge club at the home of Mrs. Osgood T. Eastman, a sister of Mrs. Charles T. Kountze, with whom Mrs. Nicholson is stopping. That evening Judge and Mrs. W. A. Redick are asking for the Orpheum and supper at the Fontenelle Messrs. and Mesdames Ward Burgess, Joseph Barker, J. DeForrest Richards, J. E. Summers and C. T. Kountze, with Mr. Ben Warren. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson will be entertained by Mrs. J. E. Summers; Wednesday evening, Mrs. F. A. Nash will have them as her guests; Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Clement Chase are planning an affair for them at the Blackstone.

CLUB MEETINGS are again in full swing after the holiday diversion and each day finds the average clubwoman deep in reports and resolutions and plans for a new year's work. Which reminds the club editor of a story concerning a prominent Omaha clubwoman which is being told sotto voce.

The clubwoman in question employed a new governess to look after her children while she flitted from club meeting to lecture, with luncheons, dinners and teas sandwiched in between. The governess was having a nerve-racking time with the obstreperous youngsters and decided she could no longer continue at her post. She would give notice to her employer, was her decision. But when to do this? Madam Clubwoman was out from early morn to late at night, or, when at home, could not be disturbed. After several days' failure to locate her employer, the little governess, in desperation, betook herself to a friend of her clubwoman-employer.

"Do you know which meeting Mrs. Blank is attending today? Please locate her if you can and tell her I cannot stay a moment longer. I will lose my mind if she does not come home and do something about those children. Tell her I can't stay. I want my money and I want to leave!"

Reaching children through the moving picture theater, a distinctly novel and recent development, is impressed upon one at this writing. Two big local organizations, the Society of Fine Arts and the Omaha Woman's club, are doing just that thing. The Fine Arts society yesterday gave the second of a series of free illustrated art lectures for children at the Monroe theater, with an explanatory art talk by the president, Mrs. W. G. Ure. Next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the educational committee of the Omaha Woman's club institutes its first children's movie programs at both the Strand and the Muse theater. Feature films, educational ones and comics, an ideal combination for children, so experts say, will make up each program, which will be passed upon by an advisory council representing educational and civic organizations, before being shown to children. Five cents is the price.

"The movement is not planned as a money making proposition, but is an effort to establish the right type of programs for young people each week and to assist in elevating the general standard of films. The Strand and the Muse theaters are running these series of ten at the request of the educational committee of the Woman's club," said Mrs. W. S. Knight, the chairman. "We hope the response will be so great it will be followed by other carefully selected programs."

Clubwomen will be present at each theater to chaperone unattended children. Mrs. E. M. Syfert, Mrs. George B. Darr, Mrs. Edward Johnson, Mrs. E. S. Jewell, Mrs. William Berry, besides Mrs. Knight, are sponsoring the new movement.

An interesting story of I. B. Stoughton Holborn, who lectures for the Drama league at the Blackstone hotel Thursday afternoon, has come to light. It is the story of Holborn's adoption of a little Canadian girl, Avis Bolobin, whom he rescued from a watery grave when both were aboard the ill-fated Lusitania. Dr. Holborn says he is still shaky from his experience. "I had made friends with the child on board the liner. We were eating luncheon when the shock came and I rushed for the child, put a life preserver on her and placed her in a lifeboat. Then I jumped into the ocean. After three-quarters of an hour I was picked up by a sailing craft." Dr. Holborn discovered later that the child was saved, but two young women who had her in charge were drowned. The little girl was on her way from Canada to England to be educated and was immediately adopted by her preserver.

This is Dr. Holborn's second visit to Omaha. He gave a course of lectures before the Fine Arts society last year on ancient architecture and the allied arts. The subject of Thursday's lecture is "The Greek and Modern Theater."
