

Sheridan County Farmers Jhow State an Example os Their Style

Sheridan county owns the distinction of being the first county in Nebraska to send a special train of farmers to attend the meetings of Organized Agriculture at Lincoln, January 15 to 19, inclusive. The large delegation (about 200) will be accompanied by a band of eighteen pieces, recruited from the towns of Hay Springs, Rushville and Gordon. At Norfolk the train will stop long enough to take on a diner and observation car, and from there will stop at all the important towns till it reaches Lincoln, from ten to twenty minutes at each place. The train will leave Sheridan county on the following schedule, tonight: Hay Springs, 8:02 a. m.; Rushville, 8:25 p. m.; Gordon, 8:55 p. m.

When this project was broached by the Sheridan County Farmers' association, even the railroad company was skeptical about moving that number of farmers from one end of the state to the other. But by united work of the three towns in the county it is now an assured fact, as proved by the certified check for $1,000 paid to the railroad company for the special train. Much of the credit for this excursion is due to the efforts of J. O. Aplan, the wide awake president of the Sheridan County Farmers' association, and County Agent A. C. North, who have taken a great interest in the idea. Immense benefit is anticipated from this excursion, as it will not only bring the farmers together, but will lead to a broadening out of ideas for future improvement of the farms of Sheridan and other counties besides setting a good precedent.

Display of Eggs Will Be Feature of Big Poultry Show

Kearney, Neb., Jan. 13.—(Special.)—Show birds by the hundreds began migrating into Kearney from all sections of the state today and it is predicted by Secretary Smith that by Monday afternoon nearly all of the 2,500 chickens which are entered in the thirty-second annual show of the Nebraska State Poultry association will have arrived and been cooped for what promises to be the keenest fowl competition that has ever been offered in the state.

The show will be formally opened Monday evening and all birds will be listed and classed before that time. On Tuesday morning will begin the judging, which it is thought will consume no more than two days. Thursday will be the feature day of the show week and all of the chickens will have received their awards by that time. Friday night will witness the closing of the show and meeting here of the association.

Several side features of the show will be of unusual interest to the crowds that attend the exhibition this year. One will be an egg display, showing the difference between the average eggs as marketed and the desirable market eggs. In view of the high price and scarcity of "hen fruit" at this season of the year, this feature will be especially attractive. The prize weight of a dozen of eggs at last winter's show was twenty-eight ounces, and they were absolutely alike in shape and color.

Corn Belt Corn Show Will Be Held At Shenandoah

Shenandoah, Ia., Jan. 13.—(Special.)—Entries have begun to arrive from Ohio, Indiana and Missouri for the first annual Corn Belt show, which will open in the armory Tuesday, January 16. The prize bushel of corn at the Missouri state farm, held in connection with the farmers' week at the college of agriculture at Columbia, Mo., will be shown. The prize ten ears from Missouri will also be entered.

The exhibits will be judged by Prof. H. D. Hughes of Ames. A round table for discussion of farm subjects will be held Thursday night when prominent men will discuss corn and its cultivation. An entertainment will be given Wednesday night with a musical program. Prof. Hughes will talk on "Insects of the Corn Plant" at this time.

Len A. Saunders of Whitesville, Mo., who was secretary nine years of the corn show that became nationally known although held in a village where there was not even a hotel, is secretary of the Corn Belt show. A thousand dollars will be offered in prizes and the boys and girls will come in for their portion. Awards of $40 will be made for the best ten ears of yellow and ten ears of white. Prize winning single ears may win as high as $5. The corn will be auctioned off the last day of the exhibit.

The Newest Influence IN MILLINERY Is Oriental and Indian

Note the unmistakable Chinese type in the Hat illustrated—Fashion is to take a new trend this season. For the moment, the impression given to expert Hat designers comes from the Orient.

The windows will reflect the glory of the new Hats from this time forth, and now when Milady desires to turn her thoughts toward Spring Millinery, Satin and Straw creations will greet her eye.

Satin in combination with straw or maline, faille ribbon Hats and Hats of Khaki-Kool are being shown.

High crowns rule the day; high-crowned mushroom sailors with wide and narrow brims, high-front toques and turbans. Many hats trimmed high in front, others with flat trimming around crown or directly in front. Chinese and Japanese ornaments are used in profusion.

Black, dark blue and dark brown are of course the most desired shades at present, but some bright colors are shown which make a delightful change from the somber tones of winter.

Firefly Green, Suzanne Rose, Ta bot Blue, Powder Gray and Pumpkin Yellow.
