New Catholic Dignitary Promises to Work for the Welfare of All

GETS GREAT RECEPTION

sympathetic co-operation for a greater and better Omaha.

"A few years ago I was traveling in the far east. There were in the troupe eleven of us. Some were first class passengers, others second class, others third class passengers. When the time came to start we found we were all in the same coach, although three scales of fare had been charged. The mystery was cleared up when we reached a steep incline. The driver called a halt. Turning to the passengers he said: 'First class passengers get out and walk; third class passengers get out and push. Needless to say, in a few moments all were third class passengers, pushing the stage coach over the rugged pass, sharing in the same work, shoulder to shoulder. When we reached the summit of the hill we all took our places again in the coach and heartily enjoyed a laugh at the expense of each other, at the same time having learned the lesson of the importance of push.'

A Greater Omaha.

"That it shall be a Greater Omaha what observant man can fail to see. For here at the gate, the passage, the emporium of the west destiny has set its foot and it says to you: 'Yours is the future, yours the commerce, yours the wealth, yours the beauty, both physical and moral, that needs must team in yonder vast plains as far even as the barrier mountains of the coast.'

"A better-Omaha it needs must be. Of that there is a pledge and prophecy in your minds and in your hearts, wherein dwell and energetic noble motives, magnificent conceptions, masterly purposes, expectant realization of ideals, of civic excellence, of civic growth and grandeur. On what do we base our expectations? Let us count over some of the assets of Omaha.

"We have the gentle zephyrs which welcomed me a month ago on my entrance to your city, when my Manila overcoat felt like tissue paper. We have our honored toastmaster, Mr. Mahoney. Then we have Mr. Wattles and the chief justice of Nebraska. We have the solidity of the commercial houses. We have the lofty and noble principles which dominate the city and its citizens. We have broad and generous institutions. We have the intelligence of the people. We have her social relations, which are so safe; her popular institutions, so beneficent and secure; the justice of her law. We have freedom, encouragement, help, upward and onward toward the noble aspirations of her citizens. We have all these, surmounted, capped, as it were, by the warm affections of your straightforward, broad-minded, noble-hearted men and women.

For Lasting Greatness.

"Mr. Toastmaster, I can assure you that the people whom I represent will always be found measuring up to high standards, and that they will always be found striving for a better Omaha, a city built on truth, love and justice—the firm and enduring foundations of lasting greatness.

"Great though their interest in the material magnificence of a growing Omaha may be, the people for whom I speak will always be found deeply concerned in that which is noblest in a noble city, namely, in the men and women who dwell in it. God has made a wonderful world; He has made nothing in it so precious as man. And, therefore, I shall put forth my best efforts in behalf of the toilers. The people of Omaha will always find me where the people of the Philippines ever found me—standing on the platform of Christian democracy, making myself all things to all men.

Manliness Is Necessary.

"May our city's growth be the brightest and best growth of our Christian civilization. And in this growth the church will have part. The church is as lofty as the love of God and as ample as the wants of man. The poet Terence wrote the memorable saying: 'I am a man and nothing that touches human nature is estranged from me.' The church here below is made up of men, and, therefore, should show this shining characteristic manhood, manliness, and all that the sublime idea implies. "It shall be our aim in private and public life, in our political and social institutions to foster this spirit. True to the cosmopolitan spirit of our world-wide church, we shall ever strive to rise above all considerations of sectional jealousy, of local narrowness, of religious prejudice, or partisan animosity. We shall strive to reach the level of a patriotism which embraces our whole country and meets all her citizens in the grasp of brotherhood. I believe this public celebration tonight is a long stride toward the recognition of Christian principles, the diffusion of Christian brotherhood.

"We shall then push on, having in mind the material, the abundant natural advantages of Omaha, situated in the center of population in the United States, seated in the very heart of the golden wheat belt, enthroned as the queen of vast tributary. Is there not, gentlemen, revealed to our minds a vision of vast possibilities, in the realization of which we shall have a large share, if we but open our minds and hearts to the blending power of sympathy? We will, therefore, clasps each man his neighbor's hand in cordial co-operation in the building up of a great, splendid and enduring city."

LAWSON NAMES M'ADOO; HE SAYS HENRY TOLD HIM

living at 1721 Twenty-first street, an apartment house.

The letter which Lawson read follows: "My Dear Mr. Lawson: If the name of the man who was the go-between in the present leak and the amount of money he gave to you, I can supply the name and the amount he received and give the name of at least one associate at the White House who participated in the haul."

The letter went on to offer to make an appointment which Mr. Lawson said he made with Mrs. Visconti. In the presence of her attorney, he said, she gave him the names of Price and McAdoo.

Asked by Representative Henry who he meant when he said he would give the name of a go-between who received a large sum for "his bit," Lawson said he referred to the name given him by Mrs. Visconti as "Secretary Tumulty."

Suggests Calling Editors.

Lawson also said Henry told him of rumors that Barney Baruch was connected with the "leak."

In a long description of his visit to Chairman Henry, Lawson said that Henry had told him of rumors that Secretary Lansing had gone to the Baltimore hotel in New York to meet Barney Barouch, four times, but that he, Henry, thought his visits were perfectly legitimate. "I told Henry," said Lawson, "that I would stake my head on it that Secretary Lansing was not telling anything he ought not to do."

When asked for the name of Mrs. Visconti's attorney, Lawson said he was a member of a Washington firm named "Brown & Brown" or "Butler & Butler." No firm of either name appears in the city or telephone directory.

Lawson declared that Henry had asked him late in December to say nothing more about the "leak" charges, on patriotic grounds, saying he owed it to the country not to mention them further for the present. At no time Lawson insisted, did he ever say that he had any direct information relating to a "leak."

Denial by Chairman Henry.

Chairman Henry then took the witness stand, Henry emphatically denied that he ever had mentioned to Lawson the name of any cabinet officer.

"Not during our whole three-hour conference did I mention to Mr. Lawson the name of any cabinet officer that he has mentioned here today," Henry asserted again and again that he had not given Lawson such information.

"I have no fear of my reputation in the house or in the country," he declared, "and what this gentleman says here today does not even disturb me."

Turning to Lawson, Henry repeated he had told him nothing. Lawson did not reply but shook his head, as if to say that he stood by his statement.

Henry Makes Denial.

Henry also declared he never had mentioned the name of a member of congress or a banker to Lawson as having been involved in the "leak."

Henry read long excerpts from a letter from Lawson to him urging an inquiry into the "leak" situation and asking that he be permitted to conduct it.

"And after that," Henry said emphatically, "he tells this committee and the country that he got his information from me. I do not seek to defend myself. I have done nothing wrong."

When Henry had concluded his testimony Lawson rose and dramatically asserted that every word he, Lawson, had uttered today was the "truth, so help me God, without variation."

In response to questions Henry declared that not only had he never mentioned any names, but that Lawson had mentioned none.

What Tumulty Told Him.

"I had no information then and have none now on my own knowledge," he said. "The first time I ever heard of an official's name in connection with this was when Secretary Tumulty told me at the White House one day that he had heard his name was being mentioned in connection with this subject."

Lawson added that after talking with Henry he had had his information before John O'Hara Cosgrave, editor of the New York World; H. J. Ridgewaf of Everybody's Magazine and Donald McDonald, publisher of a Boston financial paper.

"Call these men," Lawson shouted, "and they will bear me out in what I say."

Lawson said he told the three men that Henry considered the investigation too serious to proceed with.

Lawson was almost in tears when he said he couldn't understand why Henry should deny the statements he had made.

"I'll make good here," he shouted, "and I won't go to jail as the goat."

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head, producing violent throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetaminide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drunk before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal. Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a soulish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphate hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick, and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.—Adv.
