Excellent Cash Demand Boosts Prices On Wheat, Corn and Oats Market.

Omaha, February 19, 1917.

Today's receipts of grain were rather light but an excellent cash demand and a strong future market forced a general advance in prices, the advance being particularly noticeable in the wheat and corn markets. The cash wheat market showed the biggest gains, with prices quoted from 2-to 12-to higher and No. 2 hard wheat quoted around $1.222.22. No. 2 hard wheat prought from $1.804, 621.81; a car of light weight spring wheat sold at $1.72 and No. 4 mixed wheat ranged from $1.081.762. Improved ocean tonnage and better freight conditions served to give the builts a little more confidence today and whiles war news and the political situation have a depressing effect on the market, the sentiment among many of the traders is that prices on everything will work higher. The expert business was not very good today, but it showed that foreigners will take our wheat at every opportuoity and as fast ran he shipped.

The prices of oats is regarded as cheap is compared with the other cereals and during the last week the United States government has placed large orders to be shipped to different points sions the Mexican horder. The trade in the local pit was, at time, very lively, especially in May wheat tout on the whole the trade today was only understely active. Sharp and good middling, 11.060; middling, 10.90d; low middling, 10.20d; maders advances were made in everything and electing prices on May wheat and May corn and gats were close to the high point of the day.

Mr. Whitney asserts that the plan of the superintendents of transportation contemplates sending back into the interior all grain now held along the Atlantic and gulf coasts and for which no ocean-going bottoms can be provided in the immediate future. This grain is to be brought back to milling centers and there converted into flour and other food products. afterward going into storage, if necessary.

Will Release Cars.

This move upon the part of the superintendents, acting in unison, will release freight cars by the thousands. Then, with the cars unloaded, the plan contemplates hurrying the equipment back to the lines by which it is owned. Heavy penalties are proposed in the event such equipment is not returned to owner lines within the shortest possible time. The penalties will be such that roads will have no desire to confiscate cars of other lines and take them into their own service, paying the demurrage heretofore agreed upon.

With these cars released and back them of the super owner lines Mr. Whitney is oil.

A Life Interest.

The Sutphens, father and son, inherited the property from their wife and mother wife to provision that it should go to their hers after their deaths.

They took the case to the courts the property and following a favorable decision disposed of it to Mr. Joslyn for a consideration of $20,000. The court at this time held that the will gave them the right to sell.

make them into their difference of the demurrage heretofore agreed upon.

With these cars released and back upon owner lines, Mr. Whitney is of the opinion that afterward the roads will have little difficulty in keeping their tracks and terminals clear.

The milling of the millions of bushels of samples of grain now held along seaboard awaiting export, Mr. Whitney thinks is going to help out present conditions in many ways. It will furnish employment for a large number of extramen in the mills of the country and besides the finished product will not require anywhere near as much stortage space as the grain. It can be handled to better advantage and when the time for export arrives it can be harried on shipboard with greaters speed than the loose grain.
