Philippine Body Wrestles With Grave Matters of State of Great Britain Out of count of Great Britain.

Out of countless plans and suggestions has now risen a council of state soon to be named by Governor General Harrison. The council of state will include both the speaker of the house and the president of the senate—Sergio Osmena and Manuel Operon respectively. Just what Quezon, respectively. Just what other members it will include has not been stated. It will prohably include also the secretaries of the executive departments. As originally planned these secretaries were to form a cabinet. Under the law organizing the new depart-ments, the secretaries and their assistants may be required to attend sessions of either house of congress to aid in the discussion of any law. This gives the executive departments regular representation—without a vote—in congress. Then the plan was vote—in congress. Then the plan was broached of inaming as secretary of the interior, an office held over from the old regime and consequently open to a member of congress, Speaker Osmena. The Jones hill, passed by the United States congress in 1916, specifically prohibits the naming of a member of congress to any office he has helped to create. This provision barred the local congress from carrying out the British system to its logical conclusion.

But Speaker Osmena, after mature deliberation, declined the appointment

But Speaker Osmena, after mature deliberation, declined the appointment as secretary of the interior. In official circles it was freely stated—though not verified—that Osmena would not accept a cabinet appointment unless Quezon were also elevated to the cabinet. Politicians saw in this a coming struggle for supremacy—friendly though it might be—between these two men, the big figures of Philippine political life today. Either Quezon declined a cabinet office or the provisions of the Jones bill made such an appointment impossible. Whatever the truth of the matter, Osmena's declination made the plan impossible. It had been hoped to make his position as secretary of the lower house, analagous to that of the British premier.

council of state will provide for a premier the future alone will tell. If there is to be a premier, it is declared it must be Osmena, as he is not alone speaker of the house, but president of the nationalist party, the predominant political group in the islands. The few planters who have the advantage of centrals and modern machinery have had a wonderful year. Several companies, on the verge of bankruptcy before, have pulled themselves out of the slough and will pay dividends, reaching in some cases to 40 per cent.

Cocontrol. Yet he personally would be held responsible and might jeopardize his entire life-work. He is not yet 40, and his career in Philippine life is brilliant with promise.

especidence of The Ass Manila, Philippine Islands, Feb. 12. Though the Philippines have no war unitions factories and no vast plants of munitions factories and no vast plants for the supply of belligerent Europe with its needs, the year 1916 saw an era of remarkable prosperity in the islands. There were several causes, but chief of them was agricultural prosperity coupled with a good demand for insular products at high prices. A subordinate cause was the fact that the threatened exodus of Americans, due to greater Filipino control, did not materialize, or at least materialized to a very slight degree. multar products at high prices. A subordinate cause was the fact that the threatened exodus of Americans, due to greater Filipino control, did not materialize, or at least materialized to a very slight degree. Many Americans, taking advantage of the provisions of the retirement law, have given way in the government to Filipinos, but some proportion of them have elected to remain in the islands and the places of many of those who have said goodby to the islands have been filled by new arrivals establishing themselves in business here.

In agriculture bumper crops are reported. Rice, the staple food of the Filipino, is abundant. In agriculture humper crops are reported. Rice, the staple food of the Filipino, is abundant. All the rice-growing sections, favored by good weather, have produced almost record crops. The dearth of work animals produced by the ravages of rinderpest and the government quarantine has been a handicap, but has only made the harvest slightly less abundant. There will be need this year of rice importations from Saigon and Japan, as there always is, but there Japan, as there always is, but there will be a big decrease in the usual amount of rice imports and the money thus saved will add to the prosperity

Hemp Crop Suffers.

The hemp producers, who in 1915 suffered under the combined cloud of decreased demand because of the war (Currespondence of The Associated Press.)

Manila, P. I., Jan. 30.—Laying the foundations for the future government of the Philippines, the new Philippine congress has been wrestling in the three months of its existence with various problems of organization which have for their fundamental basis the foundation of a system of government like both that of the United States and that of Great Britain. peasant hemp grower walk into a store, make his pick of goods he wants and give 20 peso bills to pay for his purchase. Europe was still not in the market, but the United States purchased 114,000,000 Manila cigars, an increase of 70 per cent over the previous year and more than 90 per cent more than in 1914. The government collected in the internal revenue on these cigars $700,000, just 100 per cent more than in the year 1915. This increase in the cigar exportations was reflected in increased prosperity for the cigar mancreased prosperity for the cigar manufacturer—in some instances.

The average price obtained for Philippine cigars in the United States were lower than in 1915. Manufac-turers of the finer grades of cigars have viewed the increased export with grave alarm. They declare that it means that the Philippine eigar has been definitely established in the American market as a cheap smoke. Some of them have ceased advertising their cigars in the states as "Philippine" for this reason, and are using only their standard factory names. A Cocoanut planters, with high prices for copra, have also made a notable financial success during the year. Bud-rot, which had at one time seemed a menace to insular trees, has been wiped out and favorable weather aided the planters as much as high prices. There are only two plants of any size manufacturing cocoanut oil in the islands, but their initiative has been well rewarded by their profits during the last year.

Last year saw also tremondous strides in an industry which had heretofore been in its infancy—embroulery and laces. The closing of the European markets to American buyers caused a boom in the local industry. At least four big American a big increase in embrodely exports to the United States. A group of astute American business men who got into the field carly are making a fortune in the export of embrodery and laces to the United States.

There is another business which has brought big profits to the Philippines—though to a limited group. That is shipping. Interisland shipping companies have not shared greatly in this prosperity, since their rates are limited by government control. But a few venturesome spirits who have bought and sold ships have made enormous profits. One of them, a Filipino, was a government clerk ten years ago at $20 a month.
