

BOY SCOUTS HOLD ALOOF FROM LOTS

Scout Executive English Skeptic of Merits of So Many Gardening Plans.

HIGH COST OF ONE RADISH

Whether the Boy Scouts in Omaha will get into the vacant lot gardening activities in Omaha as an organization depends upon how the gardening activities contemplated by several organizations here at the present time get under way.

As yet the vacant lot gardening propaganda for this year is somewhat vague. "The Welfare board, the Woman's club and the Commercial club and other organizations are talking of starting gardening systems this summer," said Scout Executive English, "and we as scouts are ready to get into the field any time that we learn definitely who is going to handle the thing and go through with it."

Mr. English had three years' experience in the gardening work for children in Chicago, and he declares that there are many heartaches for the boys unless a better system can be worked out than he has yet seen worked.

Heartbreaks Galore.

"The owners of the ground would sell the lots right in the middle of the summer," he said, "just when the boys had their crop well under way and were just about ready to market it. That was heartbreaking to many of them and we were powerless to help it. The boys tried to hold me responsible and I tried to hold the real estate companies responsible, but they would not listen. They said it was ridiculous to expect them to hold off a sale just on account of a little garden."

Mr. English says with the laying of water pipes to water the gardens, and the paying of men to plow some of the garden produce came so high that one parent in Chicago said "Well, I think this is great stuff for the boys, but my radishes cost me 17 cents apiece."

Nevertheless, Mr. English says he will encourage the boys to do some gardening this summer, at least in their own back yards if the scouts do not actually enter into the campaign for gardening on vacant lots.

Jealous, He Pours Chloroform On Woman's Pillow

Jealous because Mrs. Jessie James, 45 years old, lavished all her love on her husband, a man whose name the police won't reveal, poured the contents of a two-ounce bottle of chloroform on the pillows in the bed where Mr. and Mrs. James were sleeping. It required two hours to restore Mr. James to consciousness.

Mrs. James, who lives at 801 North Sixteenth street, told the police the story of the attempted murder and gave them the chloroform bottle to substantiate her statements. She said that the man whom she suspects of trying to kill her and her husband is a suitor whose attentions she has repeatedly spurned.

Joe Gerspacher is Busy Boy at Auto Exposition

Joe Gerspacher of the Toozer-Gerspacher Motor company, is one of the busiest automobile men in the Auditorium. To pick out Joe around the Dort chassis is like trying to pick a particular bee out of a hive. The crowds that are around the Dort chassis are so large that it requires a policeman to clear the aisle. "The people are deeply interested in this little Dort car," asserts Gerspacher, "as it has gained for itself a reputation of being one of the best light cars on the market. It travels through the sand and mud as smoothly as a snake through the grass, and the material that is used in the construction of this little car is of superior quality and as the slogan reads, 'The quality goes clear through.'"

Stenger Builds Steel Snowsheds in Wyoming

General Superintendent Stenger of the Union Pacific is back from Wyoming, where since the raising of the recent snow blockade he has been superintending the building of the steel sheds over the cuts that were swept by the blizzards.

Within the last two weeks the Union Pacific has built two and one-half miles of steel covered snowsheds in the vicinity of Rock river. The supports for the sheds are of heavy timbers and to them is nailed heavy corrugated steel. The sheds cover both of the main line tracks through the cuts and extend back some 250 feet from either end. They are high enough to clear the head of the tallest man riding on top of the highest freight car.

Grain Exchange Rooms Indicate Patriotism

The trading room of the Omaha Grain exchange took on a patriotic aspect Friday morning. The walls fairly bristled with flags. An immense big flag was draped over the main entrance and, as its folds were flung out, its appearance was greeted with cheers, members of the exchange joining in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Jelen is Now All Fitted Out in Case War Starts

Olrich Jelen of the city clerk's office on Thursday afternoon was presented a field marshal's regalia by facetious friends. The presentation ceremony took place in one of the municipal court rooms, where Mayor Dahlman presided. Mr. Jelen will lead the Tel Jed Sokol host in the event that Uncle Sam should need their services.

Chicago Flaunts Flags When News of Plot Breaks

According to General Passenger Agent Basinger, who was in Chicago at the time, the publication of the Zimmermann note, taken to indicate a plot upon the part of Germany to involve Mexico and Japan in a war with the United States, caused intense excitement. Papers were grabbed up from the newsboys and everywhere groups of men congregated, discussing the situation.

Chicago, says Mr. Basinger, immediately began to display its patriotism by an array of flags. Before noon Thursday the streets in the downtown section of the city were a forest of flags. There were thousands of them and men and boys selling them reaped a rich harvest.

Rates Given for Teachers. Going to the Portland Meel.

General Passenger Agent Basinger of the Union Pacific is back from the meeting of the Western Passenger association, held in Chicago in conjunction with representatives of the eastern and central associations. At the Chicago meeting matters having to do with the National Educational association meeting to be held in Portland, Ore., early in July were under consideration.

It was agreed that the round trip rate from Omaha to Portland and return should be $55, the same rate to apply from other Missouri river terminals. The rate from Chicago was fixed at $67.50. On tickets sold at these rates holders will go over the direct line and, if they desire, return by one of the northern routes. The time limits on the tickets were not determined, this to be disposed of at some subsequent meeting.
