Caddock's Advance in Wrestling Game Reads Just Like Story Book

Chicago, March 26.—It reads just like a story book and is one of the most interesting sporting tales of the decade, this yarn of how Earl Caddock, the Iowa wrestler, first got his real start on the road to fame in the grappling arena. It happened right here in the Windy City, and just three years later Caddock has returned an out-and-out candidate for the world's championship title. It was in the winter of 1913-14 that this lean, raw-boned young fellow, then only a little past his majority, came to Chicago to look about a bit, as he expressed it. He had done a little wrestling around the farms in Iowa, where the sport flourished in an amateurish sort of way, and he had discovered, he said, that he could beat a lot of the strapping lads of his section. This green hand was Earl Caddock. About the first man he ran into in Chicago was Bob Oakes, the big athletic member of the Western Athletic Athletic club. Bob liked wrestling and, after listening to Caddock's tale of woe, he advised him to drop around to the Chicago Hebrew institute and consult with Ernest Sautye, the lightweight, who gave lessons in wrestling in that place. Earl took this advice, and the next afternoon was in the gymnasium looking for the instructor. He found Sautye and stated his case. There was a twinkle in Sautye's eye as he listened. "Yes, I can arrange to give you a tryout right now," he said. "We have a champion here named Ben Reuben. He isn't much, but he thinks he is. I'll see if he'll give you a whirl." Reuben was approached and was only too pleased to give the stranger a workout. Word was sent out through the building and dozens of Ben's friends flocked into gymnasium to see the amateur middleweight champion teach the farmer lad from Iowa how to take a joke. There were forced smiles on both men's faces as they watched four small mats being pushed together to make an arena. Time was called and they went to it. Reuben, much the shorter, made play at once for the long legs of the stranger. There was a wild mixup

Brokaw, Watkins and Barham Also Join Companions in Training Camp.

FOURTEEN MEN AT WORK

Hal Brokaw, outfielder; Johnny Watkins, infielder, and Wayne Barham, pitcher, joined the Rourkes in training camp yesterday. Brokaw and Watkins came up from Kansas City and Barham, after being tied up in the snow blockades in the west for several days, finally got through from Oregon. Barham was originally due Thursday night. Cy Forsythe, veteran right fielder, signed his 1917 contract yesterday, too. Cy had been working out with his mates all last week, but had not signed up. Yesterday he decided he had better accept Rourke's terms. Everybody is signed up now except Pratt and Benton. Manager Krug put his charges through three hours of stiff workouts yesterday. The wind was a bit chilly, the atmosphere a little raw and the ground soft from the rain Sunday night and Monday morning, but Marty threw in the high speed and made his athletes go to it. Fourteen men were out for practice yesterday. If the weather warms up Krug believes he will have the Rourkes in pretty good shape by the end of the week and that he will have a fairly good looking nine in action when the Rourkianians tackle the Brandeis next Sunday in the first game of the year here.

U. S. Considers Big Purchase of French Bonds, Says Lansing

Washington, March 26.—Representatives Flood, Harrison and Ragsdale, members of the house foreign affairs committee, discussed the international situation today with Secretary Lansing.

During the conference Secretary Lansing indicated that one plan to aid the allies is to help France finance the war, and that another involves the sending of a military force to the French front. It was said the president had not finally determined what to recommend in his message to congress.

Secretary Lansing made it clear that the plan which probably will be urged most will be authorization by congress of a large bond issue, whose proceeds would be devoted to purchase of French bonds. What amount of bonds, whether a billion dollars, more or less, Secretary Lansing suggested, was a matter within the province of Secretary McAdoo.

The legislative program which Secretary Lansing indicated he would favor includes a declaration that a state of war exists; enactment of the bill which passed the senate at the last session, but failed in the house, to punish espionage and unneutral acts and an appropriation of possibly $200,000 for employment of secret service agents.

The second fall required but five minutes for Warner to turn the trick, using the body scissors and bar-arm hold. Warner showed wonderful speed and knowledge of the game. He challenges all middleweights.

Do you know that there is printed in this state a paper called the Omaha Nebraskan—issued every Thursday? It has steadfastly stood for the doctrine of "America First." FOR more than a year now German politicians and German editors have quietly carried on a boycott against the Nebraskan. They have persuaded every one they could influence to cancel subscriptions and withdraw advertising. Now they are carrying on this boycott openly. SO far as my personal interests are concerned, I could, with profit, abandon this fight. But I will not abandon it until I have at least appealed to all Americans and given them the opportunity of saying whether they are willing that a publication be punished for printing old fashioned American doctrine. WILL you help me in this battle for American principles? The Nebraskan is issued every Thursday. The subscription price is $2.00 per year.
