DETECTIVE FINDS AUTO BANDITS' NEST

Pipkin and Four Sheriffs Discover Thirty-Seven Stolen Ford Automobiles.

BANK FINANCES CROOKS

Thirty-seven automobiles, all Fords ith their bodies changed and their engine numbers altered, were found at Silver Creek, Neb. during the last three days by Auto Detective Charles Pipkin. He ordered all the cars to be held for identification. It is believed that many of the cars are the roperty of Omaha persons. Detective Pipkin thinks he has uncovered in Silver Creek and vicinity thieves' syndicate, which is powerful and well organized. He says he even found a bank in collusion with the crooks, so that when the auto bandits are arrested bail is sion with the crooss, so that is the auto bandits are arrested bail is immediately forthcoming from the bank officials. He did not say that this bank was in Silver Creek, but intimated that it was very near there. One of his finds was made with the aid of four sheriffs from surrounding counties, who, armed with search warrants, visited the home of a farmer who was said to have been the man who altered and repainted the bodies of stolen cars. In the hay loft of the barn the police discovered seventy-five paint brushes. In the oats granary they found about fifty gallons of paint and a set of automobile mechanic's tools. The farmer, who could not explain satisfactorily just where he got the equipment, was locked up by Sheriff Condit on the charge of receiving stolen goods.

Wheat in South Platte Section is Badly Damaged

Section is Badly Damaged

Alex Hampton, traveling passenger agent for the Northwestern, is in from a trip in the South Platte country. He met a large number of farmers and grain men and from them ascertained that the winter wheat crop of a large portion of the state is seriously damaged and in many localities killed.

It is the opinion of the farmers, says Mr. Hampton, that the damage to the wheat occurred during the first severe cold spell last December. The 2erc weather froze the rdois of the plant to such an extent that the life was taken out. However, according to Mr. Hampton, there are a large number of fields where farmers are of the opinion that there will be one-third to half a crop.

Many of the farmers will plow their fields up, says Mr. Hampton, sow spring wheat, or later, plant corn. Other farmers will seed their fields to alfalfa or splover, and still others will let the grand rest, sowing it to wheat next fall,

Closed Town Tough On The Hot Tamale Business Omaha's hot tamale industry is on the wane.

It is almost impossible to buy hot tamales from the little white carts with baby carriage wheels that formerly thronged the streets until early hours in the morning. The falling off of the tamale trade is attributed by venders due to the strict enforcement of the 8 o'clock closing law. One tamale merchant said that his business had fallen off to such a great extent that he intended to quit the business as soon as possible. "People don't come down town like, they used to. They don't care for tamales it seems when they can't get anything to frink," he said.

Mr. Kugel declines to become a party to the removal of the health commissioner. He is willing to let the recall petitions proceed and when the time comes will stand on his legal rights to demand that specific information shall be cited to sustain the petitions should they actually be filed.
