

LARSON SAYS HE OWNED THE BOOZE

Fourteen Truckloads Seized by Sheriff Clark Now Stored in the County Court House.

Fourteen big motor trucks of contraband booze, or three freight carloads of beer and a half carload of whisky, gin and wines, was the total amount seized by Sheriff Clark in the wholesale confiscation of liquor at the Anton Larson dairy farm, Sixtieth and Center streets.

The sheriff and his deputies seized the hidden stores of booze at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, but it took until 12 o'clock at night to haul all the contraband from the dairy farm to the court house, where it was stored in the jail and in store rooms.

Besides being the first big seizure under the new prohibition law, it was one of the largest confiscations of contraband booze ever made in this part of the country. The value of the liquor was estimated at $5,000. There were more than 1,200 cases of beer and approximately 500 gallons of high-priced whiskies and wines.

To Sprinkle Streets.
Sheriff Clark said that he would carry out his promise to dump the booze into sprinkler wagons and water the streets with it as soon as the court orders it destroyed.

Larson, proprietor of the dairy farm, was arrested late Wednesday night. He obtained his release on $1,000 bond.

He said that he would "stand pat" on his statement that he owned all of the booze.

County officers, however, say that they take more stock in the statement of Mrs. Larson to a deputy Wednesday "that her husband owned only twelve cases of beer; the rest was being stored for down-town business men."

"It looks like Larson is the goat," said the sheriff. "He was probably hiding the booze for others."
The case is set for hearing May 18 in county court.

The proposed "sprinkler party" will be held immediately after that time if the court orders the booze destroyed.

five trustees who sleep every-night in the cell adjoining his.

The razor which Curtis used in his fight with the four policemen he obtained from E. G. Thompson, a jail "trustee," on the pretext that he wanted to shave. Then he borrowed some soap.

In the presence of the trustee he shaved off his French mustache and neglected to return the razor, which he concealed in his clothing.

Uses Soap for Grease.
With the shaving soap, he greased the steel bars he was sawing so that no tell-tale squeaks emanated while he was cutting the metal. He had taken the precaution of "soaping" the bars on the outer window before he began to saw.

After his capture, Curtis was taken under heavy guard to the office of Chief of Detectives Maloney. There he was stripped. On his right thigh was the scar of a bullet wound which, police say, connects him with a bank robbery in Randolph, Minn., last September.

The Randolph robbery was, according to police information, a most daring affair. One of the bandits, who had entered the bank and shoved a revolver under the clerk's nose, made his escape amid a fusillade of bullets. One of these bullets hit the robber in the thigh, witnesses said. The bandit, weakened by loss of blood, sought refuge in a clump of woods near Randolph. After he had been hiding there for several hours, a woman, supposedly the bandit's wife, drove up in an automobile and together they sped away.

The hearing on Curtis' petition for a habeas corpus writ was postponed until Friday at the request of his counsel, Attorney Benjamin J. Baker.

Diamond Pin Worth $1,000 Found In Carpet Sweeper at the Fontenelle

A week ago, Mrs. A. V. Kinsler, attending the big Red Cross ball at the Hotel Fontenelle, lost a diamond pin worth $1,000. She did not know whether she lost it while dancing, or while promenading the mezzanine floor.

She reported the loss to the hotel management, and told her friends. Whispered guesses, which soon expanded into detailed stories concerning the doings of a "society raffles" began to go the rounds of the exclusive set.

Where would the mysterious gentleman-thief strike next?
Advertisements in the newspapers failed to restore the pin.

Mrs. Kinsler was in the ladies' room of the Hotel Fontenelle Wednesday afternoon, and encountered Mrs. Elizabeth Cartledge, the housekeeper, who was busily pushing a carpet sweeper back and forth.

"Oh, dear," exclaimed Mrs. Kinsler. "I do wish I could find my diamond pin. I just know I lost it here, and that whoever found it is keeping it." Mrs. Cartledge ruffled immediately. "If you lost anything in this hotel and it was found, the employees would certainly return it. The employees of this hotel are all honest, hard working people."

Mrs. Kinsler left the room and went downstairs. Mrs. Cartledge continued to push the sweeper to and fro. She pushed more vigorously than usual, for a moment, and the sweeper suddenly stuck. Mrs. Cartledge, exasperated, turned it upside down and knocked a collection of dust, threads, papers and strings out into a dustpan. From the collection of debris a hard ball of stuff fell out. Mrs. Cartledge picked it up. It was the missing pin. Constant brushing against the sweeper rolls had twisted it a trifle and wound it round and round with strings, hairs and threads and it took Manager Letton ten minutes to cut the stuff away with a pen knife. When the pin was returned to Mrs. Kinsler she was in raptures.

BOY SCOUTS OPEN GARDEN CAMPAIGN

Spirit of American Womanhood Shown by Mrs. E. C. Henry, Who Directs Tractor Breaking Ground.

The patriotic spirit of American women is shown in this picture of Mrs. Margaret A. Henry, caught as she was directing the plowing of a plot of ground near the Field club, obtained through her efforts, to be used by Omaha Boy Scouts in growing grain and vegetables.

Not only did Mrs. Henry get permission from the county commissioners to cultivate this ground, which is part of the county poor farm, but she also volunteered to attend to the plowing at her own expense.

Mrs. Henry became interested in the efforts of the Boy Scouts through her husband, Dr. E. C. Henry, who is president of the organization.

How the Tractor Works.
The tractor shown is the latest achievement of the Smith Motor Truck corporation of Chicago. Mrs. Henry heads Henry & Co., distributors for the tractors in this territory. Such tractors are expected to play an important part in the year's program of increased production.

It is built of high grade steel throughout and is so designed that it can be attached in a few moments to a Ford. It can be used as motive power for thirty-one distinct operations on the farm, chief among which are plowing, dragging, raking, cultivating and pulling a binder. All of those operations require from two to five horses.

Use Gang Plows.
Tests have proved that this attachment will enable the operator to plow from an acre to an acre and a half per hour, which is more than five horses can do. Two horses with a single plowshare can plow about two and one-half acres per day. Five horses with a two-plow share gang plow, will plow about five acres in a ten-hour day.

It is asserted that this work is no harder on the Ford than ordinary driving, because the gear ratio of the attachment is so constructed that the motor is working in high gear all the time. The gasoline consumption in the tests so far made has averaged about one gallon to each ten miles.

The gang plow used in the work was furnished by Manager Parrot of the Oliver Chilled Plow works in the interest of the boy scouts' operations.

There are thousands of GMCs on duty today, and their performance stands as visible evidence of what you may expect from them.

There's a GMC for EVERY NEED
"Put It Up to Us to SHOW You."

You've heard of horses that "ate their heads off"—whose cost of keep was quite as great as the value of the work they did. Some trucks are that way also; for the man who pays the bills—their operation is so costly as to make their use almost prohibitive.

Reliability, simplicity of operation and a type of construction that requires but a moderate amount of care, are, to be sure, requisites of a worthwhile truck; but, if such features are not to be had with a reasonably low upkeep cost their value is considerably reduced.

That GMCs might be highly satisfactory from every standpoint, this factor of low upkeep was set down by their builders as the fourth fundamental principle to be lived up to in their construction. The GMCs now in service are making an enviable reputation for themselves as trucks that can be maintained at a minimum expense.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Adv.
