TOPICS FOR SABBATH

Sermons Appropriate To and Commemorative of Mothers' Day in Most of the Protestant Churches.

"Mothers' Day" will be the topic of most of the pastors of the Protestant churches of the city. The services commemorative of this day will be held in the morning as a rule and in addition to the sermons there will be appropriate music.

The white flower has been adopted as the proper insignia and men especially are requested to wear one in the buttonhole of the lapel of the coat.

At the First Baptist church Sunday night the pastor, A. A. DeLarme has announced as his topic "The Influence of Mothers in the World's Wars." There will be extra music by a large chorus choir, including DeArmond's hymn, "Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me," sung by Mrs. E. P. Williams, soprano, of Washington, D. C. The interior of the church will be decorated with the national colors and banners bearing the inscription, "Mother and Son." Everybody attending this patriotic and Mothers' day service has been invited to wear a white carnation in memory of the mother dead and a pink one in honor of the mother living.

Representative women of the Baptist churches of greater Omaha will unite Sunday evening in giving a missionary pageant in Trinity Baptist church, Twenty-fifth and F streets. The program is under the direction of Mrs. H. J. Bailey of Calvary Baptist church. She reports that as many women, dressed in appropriate costumes, will represent twelve nationalities seeking missionary instruction in America and that a double chorus of young women will furnish music appropriate to the occasion. In all more than twenty-five women will appear upon the platform at one time. The costumes are said to be beautiful and like Joseph's coat "of many colors." This pageant will take the place of the regular Sunday evening services.

The Women's Missionary society of the First United Presbyterian church will hold an all-day meeting in the church Friday. The day will be spent in sewing for the Visiting Nurses. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock, followed by a short program. The subject for the day is "How Porto Rico Became Our Possession."

Irish Readiness.

Pat was walking along the road reading an Irish comic paper and laughing at the jokes, when he was stopped by an Englishman who wanted to know what he was laughing at. Pat replied by handing him the paper, remarking that a particular joke to which he pointed would make anybody laugh.

The Englishman took the paper, read the joke, and, handing it back to Pat, remarked: "The man who would laugh at that would be an awful flat."

Just then the Englishman slipped on a bit of orange peel and fell to the ground, whereupon Pat remarked: "The man who wouldn't laugh at that is flatter."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Getting Even.

"Now, what do you want?" asked the sharp-tempered woman.

"I called to see if I could sell you some bakin' powder, ma'am," said the seedy gentleman with the staggering whiskers.

"Well, you can't sell no bakin' powder here and I ain't got no time to waste on peddlers, anyway."

"Come to think of it, ma'am," said the seedy gentleman, as he fastened his bag, "I wouldn't care to sell you any powder. This poky little kitchen of yours is so low in the ceilin' that the bread wouldn't have no chance to rise."—Chicago Post.

PROF. AMOS S. HERSHEY

By PROFESSOR AMOS S. HERSHEY
(Of Indiana University)

An alliance with Great Britain would make much easier the preservation of our liberties and vital interests and the development of our national policies in America as well as in Europe and the Far East.

The British empire is largely a confederacy of free peoples with sentiments and institutions similar to our own, and, except in certain matters of trade, our mutual interests are not seriously antagonistic.

Where such interests do conflict, as perhaps in Latin America, they are readily capable of compromise or adjustment.

The fundamental mutual interests of both the British empire and the United States are those usually denominated in our presidential campaigns as "peace and prosperity."

In the main, both peoples are materialistic and utilitarian. In both countries no slogans appeal with more force than those of the "full dinner pail" and national security with a view to the enjoyment of "all the comforts of home."

War is generally regarded by the Anglo-Saxon world not merely as a useless survival of a barbaric past, but as a rule an unwelcome disturbance of business, of games, and of all the other peaceful vocations and avocations in which our citizens as well as British subjects delight.

Another mutual and perhaps sentimental (though no less vital) interest is that described by such terms or phrases as democracy, the right of self-government, western liberalism, the political and economic freedom of the individual (including the emancipation of woman), etc.

If we desire the triumph of such ideals over Prussian militarism, autocracy and organization, the best way would seem to be to form an alliance with the British empire and act in conjunction with the newly awakened democracies of Russia and China, as well as with the older democracies of France and Italy.
