Shade in the Summer Sunlight

Oh, yes, we wear velvet crowns in the middle of summer. And then to prove how airy we can combine the seasons we arrange a brim of maline transparently under the heavy material. The model which uses extremes so charmingly is a deep, dull brown, and the swirls of imitation aigret which trim it at three graceful angles are of the same rich color.

LEGHORN has come richly into prominence this summer. It flaunts itself in all colors of the rainbow as well as in its own unstained, native hue. This hat of natural colored leghorn has a circle of forget-me-nots at the edge of its brim, forget-me-not blue moire ribbon circling its crown and descending via the ends of a bow into fascinating little forget-me-not balls.

THEATER MANAGER HAS U-BOAT SCHEME

Wilfrid Ledoux Would Have Fence Built Around Ships to Guard Against Torpedoes.

Wilfrid Ledoux, manager of the Empress theater has an invention which he believes will be effective against submarine attack.

His idea is a sort of "fence" built of steel and wood so balanced as to float in the water. The "fence" is to extend down as deep as the bottom of a vessel. It is to be drawn by a submarine.

In operation two such "fences" would be drawn through the water and between the "fences" the steamer would move, thus establishing protection against the torpedoes, which would explode against the "fences" and leave the ships unscathed.

Each "fence" might be from 5,000 to 10,000 feet long, giving room for several steamers to move along between them.

One objection to the invention would be that it would prove a long and unwieldy contrivance that could not easily be controlled out in the stormy ocean where the waves would have a tendency to hurl it against the ships that it is intended to protect.

Mr. Ledoux has been elected recently to the board of governors of the National Institute of Inventors, whose duties are to consider from a commercial standpoint the practicality of ideas from members applying for funds to complete their devices.

Railroad Employees Will Spend Vacations on Farms

The prospect of a new kind of summer vacation is staring the railroad employees of the central west in the face, especially the office men and women.

It is the rule in railroad offices that each year each employee is to have a vacation of two weeks with full pay. In addition, there has always been transportation to such point as they might designate.

If the plan that is now under contemplation by the heads of the railroads is carried out, this summer there will be the usual vacation, but instead of climbing mountains, catching fish and lolling in hammocks in the shade, men and women will be called upon to do their bit in helping the country along.

Plans being matured contemplate requesting the men to go to the farms where they will help out during the rush season, doing the class of work they are best qualified to perform.

Instead of the women dressing up and playing lady at some fashionable resort, they will be expected to go to country homes where they can help

Child Looking for Rubber Ball Falls and Is Badly Hurt

It was a bright red rubber ball that Gwen, 3-year-old son of C. M. Clayton, telegrapher, living upstairs over 915 South Thirteenth street, and two neighbor children were playing with yesterday evening on a veranda overlooking the sidewalk.

Somehow the rubber ball got out of the child's grasp and rolled through an opening in the banister to the sidewalk below.

Gwen peered through the opening for the ball and in doing so fell twenty feet on his head to the sidewalk below.

He suffered a fractured skull and possible internal injuries. Dr. Shook, who attended him, had the child removed to St. Joseph hospital. It is feared that he cannot recover.
