

WOMANHOOD OF THE NATION IS AT STAKE

Mrs. Ohaus Says that Morals of Young Girls Must Be Guarded More Than Ever Before.

Mrs. Rose M. Ohaus, head of the domestic relations department of the Board of Public Welfare, believes that the conservation of young women is one of the problems which should be faced in connection with the war situation. She avers there is a tendency among many girls and young women to be unguarded in their morals while under a spell of sentimental regard for men in military camps.

She read the following paper at a sectional meeting of the State Conservation congress:

"Conserve food, conserve labor, conserve all the tremendous natural and manufacturing resources of our wonderful land, but when the war is over and the remnants of our young manhood return to take up life again and make of the nation 'the land of promises realized,' let the glory of the nation continue to be its women. Let us conserve our womanhood; let us save to the honor and glory of our land and the unsullied lives and names of our young girls.

"There is and always has been the question of the erring woman. Our responsibility toward her is one of the gravest concerns of the community.

Face Great Peril.

"There is, however, in these war times, a new and a grave danger, and that is that the hitherto good girl enticed by the glamor of war, of the soldier going forth to battle for, and if need be die for his land, falls into the error of forgetting all the long, long future, and all the possible issues of war; she falls an easy prey to the designs of carefree youth, irresponsibly giving herself, her youth, her virtue, all that sets her aside from the woman of sin, and sacrifice herself for the gratification of the sentimental appeal to her senses that the soldier makes. It is for the conservation of this young woman that I especially appeal.

"Let us learn through the sorrows of our allies the lesson of the lack of system during the early war days taught the nations of Europe.

"We need the labor of women; in all the old lines of endeavor we need their continuance, and in countless new lines will their assistance be required, but in all and in every way let the citizens of America save their women from the disaster that has befallen their European sisters. Let not the pall of delinquency in women and children darken our land; let no bitter aftermath of nameless children, ruined women and desolated homes follow America's help to the nations at war.

Must Organize Right.

"Let us organize now and rightly, legally, systematically protect our girls from themselves as well as from the exigencies of war. Let the home mother more carefully guard the pride of the nation—the purity of our womanhood.

"This war with its awful lessons comes home to us all. We know war's sequel. Not a family but will mourn its dead; not a home that will not in one way or another pay its toll of the war. If not in actual loss of life, in varied other ways will we pay the price. Many young men and women will be obliged to quit school in order to support the dependents made so by the men's absence in war and in numberless ways will lives be changed.

To Lighten Days Ahead.

"All the sorry, sad and lonely days ahead of every American can be lightened and brightened if shorn of the horrors that appal the older nations at war. Let this nation of ours, strong in the right, armed for what it feels a war for justice, come forth from the fray with its hammers for righteousness held proudly aloft. Let there be no sorrowful, no shameful homecoming for those spared from the battlefield and camp. Let America's homecoming be to homes left inviolate to hearts awaiting in hope and faith and love, the return of the warriors, whom all may honor and all proclaim."

Women Discuss How to Plan the Home Meals

Meal planning and food habits were earnestly discussed by the women's conservation congress.

"With the substitution of so many foods advocated by the government our instinct can no longer guide us and we must learn to know what a balanced ration is," said Miss Alice Loomis of the home economics department of the state university.

"Men, too, must learn to eat the new foods their women folks will prepare. It isn't going to do any good for women to learn how to use corn products if the men aren't going to eat them."

If the ration is not balanced children may suffer from not receiving enough nutritive food, Miss Loomis pointed out. The use of abundant foods, corn, honey, rhuhab and beans, was advocated. Miss Agnes Finnegan of Wayne, Neb., led the meal-planning discussion.

PEOPLE TO LEARN OF THE RAILROADS

Ballard Dunn Says that This Will Be One of the Results of the Present World War.

"Transportation Problems," by Ballard Dunn, Western Association of Railroads, was the first address made to the State Conservation congress on the closing day. A discussion led by J. W. Shorthill, secretary of the Nebraska Co-operative Grain and Live Stock Shipping association of York, followed the address. In part, Mr. Dunn said:

"Probably the chief lesson that we in America are going to learn as a result of our participation in the world war is a sense of proportion.

This is going to come as a result of the necessity which the present emergency has put upon us, of really getting acquainted with each other.

Acquainted With Railroads.

"This is going to be especially true as far as our railroads are concerned. The people cannot escape, if they will, the necessity of getting acquainted with the railroads and of learning the part which the railroads play in the every day affairs of our nation. The railroads cannot escape getting acquainted with the people. And I am sure, while we all regret the coming of the crisis which is going to force this get-together spirit, you will all agree with me that in the end we will be the better for it.

"In our individual lives we know that it is the sudden crisis that calls upon us to solve the extraordinary and face the unusual that our characters are built. The same is true of our nation and we are laying here today the foundation of a real national character."

Hitchcock Home On Dodge And Twentieth is Sold
