OMAHA CLERGYMEN
TALK CONSERVATION

Rev. L. Groh Says That Thrift Is Again Looked on as a Virtue, as in Olden Days.

Ministers in many Omaha churches Sunday preached on conservation of the country's food supply.

This was done at the request of Herbert C. Hoover, national food administrator, who reached nearly all the ministers of the country last week through the telephone companies. He requested the companies to call up the ministers and make known his desire to have the evils of food waste proclaimed from the pulpits. At least 90 per cent of the ministers promised to preach on the subject or at least to mention it in the course of their sermons.

The incident in Christ's life which he fed the 5,000 was a favorite text for the day. Rev. Dr. L. Groh, pastor of St. Mark's English Lutheran church, chose this text, laying special emphasis on the last clause, "And the disciples gathered up the fragments that were left."

Gather Up the Fragments.
"They might easily have said, 'We don't need to gather up the fragments. The Master can make more bread when we are hungry as he made this.' But the important thing is that they did gather up the fragments and saved them," said Dr. Groh.

"Waste is our great national fault today. Through years of prosperity we have come to have a false standard. Those who have money seek to make the fact known to their neighbors by showing how much they can waste. Honest thrift has come to be looked on as meanness and stinginess.

"When I was a boy, I remember, men would work from sun to sun for what they earn in an hour now. Women worked at 25 cents a day, and it wasn't an eight-hour day either; it was about a twelve-hour day. Of course, in those days you could get a quarter of a carcass of veal for 50 cents and now you pay about that much for two pounds.

Hives of Industry.
"In those days the farm houses were busy hives of industry, too. All through the winter, the spinning wheels were busy spinning the flax and weaving the cloth that finally was made into clothing for the members of the family.

"Of course, we don't want to go back to the spinning wheel. But we do need to go back to more of the hardy life of industry and thrift. We need to get rid of our false standards of living and adopt standards of sturdy independence.

"It is astonishing that many of our people have forgotten so much of thrift and conservation in the food and other affairs of everyday life that they have to teach these things now in the colleges. Nearly everybody knows how to be thrifty and this knowledge should be put into practice. To be saving, especially in food, is the highest kind of common sense. It is wicked to waste and he who deliberately wastes is an enemy of the rest of the people. Deliberate waste ought to be looked upon as a crime. Thrift ought to be honored highly and thrifty people who are big enough not to be ashamed of their thrift ought to be held in highest esteem."

Iowa Guardsmen Go
Into Active Service

Des Moines, Ia., July 2.—Four thousand recruit members of the Iowa National Guard went on active duty today at their armories all over the state.

All members of the organization who did not see service on the Mexican border have been assembled for a period of intensive training prior to the federal call.

They will not be mobilized at any central camp, but small camps will be established wherever a Guard unit is located.
