Club Beaux May Return.

Few of you know just how desolate the landscape has seemed at the Country club since the departure of the most eligible beaux to the officers' reserve training corps at Fort Snelling. For a time all the fair maidens were obliged to dance by themselves or depend for amusement upon the tender mercies of some of the handsome elderly bachelors. There were so few bachelors, however, and so many pretty girls that the situation was really serious.

The arrival at Fort Omaha of several highly eligible young bachelors relieved the tension slightly, but even that was only a makeshift. Three popular young men in brass buttons, (story-book soldiers always wear brass buttons) who were not able to leave their posts until late and could only stay until 11:30 proved only like a drop of water to a man dying of thirst on the desert.

Now comes a welcome rumor, which so far lacks confirmation, that some of the former beaux of the Country club are to come back to Omaha soon. Recent travelers returning from Fort Snelling say that they heard there hints that all the younger officers, men under 23 years of age, are to be returned to their homes for the present. News of this sort brings a ray of hope that Country club dances will no longer be confined to the elder married set, but that the young people who have frolicked there so gaily in the past years will again have a turn before the summer is over. Burdette Kirkendall, Warren Breckenridge and Lloyd Smith were some the names mentioned in connection with the return of the popular young men.

MANAGES SALE FOR RED CROSS AT SPEEDWAY.

Mrs. Howard H. Baldrige

Mrs. Howard Baldrige, chairman of the sale of refreshments at the races yesterday, for the benefit of the Red Cross, began bright and early in the morning to prepare for the huge hungry throng of spectators.

Three beautiful booths, the work of Mrs. C. L. Burdick, were decorated with Red Cross emblems, the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the allies.

Mrs. C. A. Hull with her committee sold 10,000 home-made sandwiches from attractive wicker baskets, tied with ribbons of the national colors. Mrs. E. T. Swobe supplied the people with ice cream cones, candy, cigars and gum, while a bevy of young society buds in Red Cross nurses' costumes and white veils acted as venders in the grand stand.

King Ak May Stage Big Military Parade This Fall

A big military parade is among the prospects for the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities this fall.

The board of governors has been working on this for some time, though it is not yet definitely decided upon. It is thought that by that time so many troops will be in camp and in training in and around Omaha, at Fort Omaha and at Fort Crook that it would be very little trouble to get the requisite number of infantry, machine gun platoons, artillery division, and possibly cavalry regiments to make a wonderful spectacle in the way of a daylight parade.

Everywhere the governors of Ak-Sar-Ben are hearing the remark that the historical parade of last year was the finest daylight parade ever put on in the twenty odd years of Ak-Sar-Ben's existence. Now the question is, what to do this year to equal the brilliance of the pace that has been set. It is thought that nothing would be more appropriate this year than a military parade, especially since Nebraska troops would figure largely among those readily available for such a parade.

The nature of the electrical parade for the night spectacle accompanying the grand entry of the king, has not yet been definitely decided upon, or at least has not been announced publicly.

Commercial Club Wants Lord Northcliffe to Come

Omaha would like a visit from Lord Northcliffe, the noted English newspaper man and the man who put Lloyd George in the premiership. The Commercial club is seeking to get this noted Englishman here for a day. He would be asked to speak to the Commercial club at a public affairs luncheon if he were to come. No definite reply has yet been received.

Mother With Little Girl Seeks Place in Country

Here is an opportunity for some overworked farmer's wife to obtain an expert housekeeper and incidentally help a good mother who is without friends and funds in our large city. She has tried repeatedly to find a position as a domestic in the city, but has been handicapped because of her little 10-year-old daughter, with whom she will not part.

Finally, on the point of despair because of her rapidly diminishing funds and the continued high cost of living, she applied to the Board of Public Welfare, where she asked Mrs. Rose Ohaus for assistance.

"In these days when a good maid is at a premium and housewives are crying for efficient and trustworthy help, it seems almost incredible that a woman of refinement who has made home-making her lifelong profession should be in such a plight," said Mrs. Ohaus.

"The woman is proud and does not wish to give her name. Her character is unimpeachable and she is all that could be desired for a good housekeeper and cook. She cannot do other kind of work because of lack of education."

The woman prefers a place in the country or small town, as she thinks she would be more likely to be able to keep her little girl with her.

Any of The Bee housewives who are interested in helping this little woman may apply at The Bee office or at the Welfare board, care of Mrs. Rose Ohaus, for further information.

Go to New York to Bid Omaha Nurses Bon Voyage

R. J. Dinning of this city and Mrs. R. B. Schneider and Miss Marguerite Schneider of Fremont, Neb., left Tuesday night for New York City to bid bon voyage to Miss Louise Dinning and Mrs. Etta Schneider Turner, who will sail for France Saturday to serve as Red Cross nurses in a special unit.

It was first thought that the unit would postpone its sailing, but word received late Tuesday from Miss Dinning told her father to come at once.

Mr. Dinning, Mrs. Schneider and Miss Marguerite Schneider will arrive in New York tomorrow and remain with the young women until after the sailing.

Mercer Mo., Hit by Tornado, Appeals to Omaha for Aid

The relief committee of Mercer, in Mercer county, Missouri, has appealed to the Commercial club of Omaha for assistance in the hour of need following the tornado which practically wiped that little place off the map on June 12. Many were killed and 175 families made homeless. The loss of property is estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars. A. A. Aley of Mercer, Mo., is president of the citizens relief committee there. Checks for this relief are being sent either direct to him from Omaha, or to Commissioner Manley of the Commercial club of Omaha, who will forward the money.

For Cool July Day

When her suit decided on the daring innovation of going without pockets, this lady in porcelain green burella insisted on a belt which should detach itself at the sides and loop down into a sling, where she could rest her hand. After that, quaintly cut reveres, sharply different cuffs and a button straying from the usual place for buttons were used to make sure that her simple suit would be "Oh, so different." The quaint little hat she wears has a crown of leghorn banded in red velvet and a brim of red chiffon, from which dangle luscious-looking California cherries.

Come to Omaha to Wed, but They Forget that it is a National Holiday

William Raish and Mary Norton, when at home live out near Touhy, in Saunders county, this state. Bright and early yesterday they arrived in Omaha, coming over in an automobile, making the drive of fifty miles in less than three hours.

To their friends at home William and Mary asserted that the trip to Omaha was that they might see the automobile races, but as a matter of fact, these races to them were a matter of secondary consideration. Really they came to Omaha for the purpose of getting married. They slipped up on this, however, and when they return home they will be enjoying the same single blessedness that has been theirs all their lives. However, they will be able to tell their friends all about the auto races.

While William and Mary no doubt have found much enjoyment in watching the speed demons circle the speedway, they are grieved over the fact that they are unable to return to Touhy as man and wife. This inability all comes about by reason that they decided to wed among strangers and that they picked the wrong day, a national holiday, for the event.

When William and Mary reached the court house, bent on securing a license to wed, they were confronted by the janitor of the building. William confided to the janitor the principal thing that brought him to Omaha. That dignitary smiled, sighed and then remarked:

"Young man, nothing doing today. Don't you know this is the birthday of our country and don't you know that the license clerk, the county judge and all the members of the force of the marriage bureau are at home, or are out enjoying the holiday? Don't you know that the license book is locked in the vault and that the combination of the lock to the vault has been lost and can't be found until tomorrow morning?

"No, sir, and while I'm sorry for you, there is nothing doing until tomorrow."

The young man and woman accepted the situation, went down the street, bought some peanuts, ate them and then went out to the races, somewhat sadder than when they came to Omaha. However, they had the satisfaction of knowing that Thursday they will apply for and secure a marriage license in Saunders county and there they will be wed. At least that is what William said they would do.
