The Picturesque Small Hat

OF vivid apple green, deftly set off with touches of black, is this sailor hat. Let one get the impression of too great severity, it develops its crown on curving and generous bell lines.

TINY fronds of burnt goose circle about the crown of this brown liere hat in a cheery-looking little procession. Satin swatches the full crown and ties at the front into an ornament, which seems rather undecided as to whether it ought to be cocarde or a bow.

THIS quaint little cavalier hat combines purple straw, lemon yellow silk Jersey and handkerchief points of purple chiffon in an ascending series, which starts at the brim facing, and only ends when the crown has climbed as far upward as it dare without aspiring to steeple proportions.

before, but they cannot be stressed too much. We need mineral matter, or ash, which occurs in fresh fruits and vegetables, for building the structure of the body, and for regulating the body. We can get this mineral matter from milk, eggs, the hulls of grains, and some too important sources; but fruits and green vegetables are too important sources to be neglected.

Potatoes Take Another Drop, With More to Follow

Potatoes have taken another drop in price in the last week, but they are still far from the prices of a year or two ago, in spite of the fact that every house seems to have its potato patch and the acreage and promised crop for this year is bigger than it has ever been before.

are from Florida in the early spring or late winter. Then the supply comes from places farther and farther north until the home grown ones come on. These didn't amount to much this year. And now the last are coming from Oregon.
