Omaha Red Cross In Active Work

APPARENTLY oblivious of the fact that old Sol is pouring forth his strongest and most direct rays, Omaha women continue to bend every effort toward Red Cross and war relief work. Instead of a depletion in the ranks, the last month has seen a reinforcement from the school set, who, unwilling to fritter away their vacation, have joined the great amalgamation of workers.

Many of the girls attending eastern schools have returned with new ideas and unlimited enthusiasm for the work which they began in school.

Eight patriotic high school girls volunteered to pass four hours a day at the Red Cross headquarters making a card catalogue for the 30,000 membership blanks. Miss Edith Partridge, a teacher at the Farnam school, acts as supervisor. The girls are splendid workers and completed 5,000 cards the first week. They do not consider themselves martyrs to the cause. In fact, they are getting a great deal of amusement out of the variety of names.

"I found one man by the name of 'Ishe,' and the next one was 'Sureheis,'" said one

The Association of Collegiate Alumnae Knitting Coterie is one of the most faithful groups and meets every Friday to make sleeveless sweaters and mufflers for the sailors on the battleship Nebraska.

Mrs. Joseph Barker is president of the first-aid class shown in the picture, which, for the most part, represents the school girl set. Little Jean Guiou is the mascot of the class, of which Dr. William Anderson is the instructor.

Society matrons and buds were greatly in evidence at the races the Fourth of July and raced their supply long before the warm and hungry throng of spectators were satisfied. The picture shows some of the most successful of the Red Cross venders, who helped to make approximately $500 for the Red Cross.

With the Social Clubs

The Sermo club entertained in honor of Mrs. C. W. Miller of Portland, Ore., at the home of Mrs. J. E. Goodrich Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Miller is a former member of the club. Fourteen women were present.

Mrs. Carrie Dawson Scott will entertain the Sojourners' club of Malva White Shrine at luncheon at Carter Lake club Tuesday.

Who Are Most Ardent Country Clubbers?

THERE'S a homely old expression needed for the beginning of this little effusion. It is "Just for greens." Now, "just for greens," who do you suppose are the most ardent country clubbers in Omaha? Seymour Lake Country club, Carter Lake club and the Boat club at Manawa, of course, must be left out of the consideration because they all have cottages about them. That narrows the subject down to the Country, Happy Hollow and Field clubs.

At the first-named club Mr. and Mrs. Dick Stewart are the most faithful attendants during the summer. They make the most of their privileges in fair or stormy weather. Even on dark and dismal days when few people attend the club they manage to steal out from their busy city lives to enjoy a game of golf. There are any number of others who are enthusiastic frequenters of this summer gathering place.

The "golfing Peters," as a family, are good country clubbers. Then there are the Barton Millards, the John Redicks, the W. J. Foyes, the W. T. Burns and so on indefinitely, for nearly all the resident members of the Country club in Omaha are faithful attendants at its various functions. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Davidson, who are among the newest acquisitions to the list of members, are frequent visitors at the club house and bid fair to rival some of the older members in their faithful attendance.

At the Field club the situation is rather divided, for the enthusiastic golfers are not always the most frequent diners and vice versa. Taken all in all, though, probably Mr. Albert Cahn is the most ardent country clubber in the Field club set. Close after-
