When Greek meets Bulgar then comes a real tug-o-war.

No inclination to brag, but where can you match Omaha's climate?

The weather man is presumed to play no favorites. Tell it to the iceman.

Corn raisers and collar makers alike sigh for weather built on the melting mood.

Very little news filters out of Austria. Its scarcity emphasizes the grip of the tired feeling.

Things have come to such a perilous pass that the only safe vehicle of interstate booze is under the belt.

The "short and ugly word" is missing from Congressman Lobeck's rejoinder, but the spirit is there.

Coming down to brass tacks, Berlin has no advantage over Washington in the matter of discordant counsels.

It may be conceded without argument that Bethmann-Hollweg's retreat embodied the famous tactics of a "strategic victory."

No matter what else falls below the standard, the volume of sound from Missouri senators sustains the windy reputation of the state.

Old Glory will be literally as well as figuratively flying over the battlefields of Europe when our augmented air forces get into action.

Another five billion dollar loan to the Allies will give the home folks a concrete notion of how buying for a war runs up into real money.

"God save the mark!" Neutral exchanges shy at the once mighty token of German financial power. Today it looks like two for a quarter.

The socialist Vorwaerts observes that Germany's foreign policy "has the reputation of dishonesty." Truth crops out occasionally in unexpected quarters.

"The last argument of kings" is what the German crown prince calls the U-boats, and most folks agree with him, the end of the terror of the sea being fairly in sight.

If his requisition for 12 per cent of the canning pack of the season is to be taken as a proof of his intentions, Uncle Sam has no thought of letting his soldiers go hungry.

King Cotton promises to round out the year's business with a crop of 11,600,000 bales, now selling around 25 cents a pound. Buying a bale is no longer a matter of small change.

One sweet consoling thought is always present in connection with the food control bill—everybody will eventually know what Senator Reed thinks of Herbert Hoover. But does it really make any difference?

The fire loss record in the United States and Canada for the last six months total $144,000,000, exceeding that of 1915 by $52,000,000 and 1916 by $19,000,000. In this huge line of waste conservation appears to have lost its grip.

"The House of Windsor" may do for a present day designation of the British royal family, but iconoclastic history pays little attention to the tender feelings of personages, no matter how exalted their station may be. Therefore it is altogether probable that genealogy will continue to trace the line of British royal descent through its various crossings of the channel just the same as it has for many centuries.

Handwriting on the Wall

Washington Post

Herbert Hoover has prepared a little printed card about food. His idea is to have it hung in the kitchen of every American home.

Hoover's card is simple, concise, easy to understand, possible of being complied with. He converts the unnecessary mouthfuls into thousands of cattle and tons of bread for the use of the boys in the training camps and the soldiers on the firing line.

Hoover's card is simple, concise, easy to understand, possible of being complied with. He converts the unnecessary mouthfuls into thousands of cattle and tons of bread for the use of the boys in the training camps and the soldiers on the firing line.

It may well be that the thousand and one tiny savings will determine the issue of the war. Here is where every one can help, the women most of all. It beats the little flag on the lapel of the coat, and carries the banner far beyond the White House gates.

"Do you understand these things?" asked the Master, "then happy are ye if ye do them!" The most beautiful theory in the world becomes the worst of dry rot if not made a working force.

Neat little quotations from Stevenson or Browning look well on the wall. But a kind word or helpful act in the family is worth a rummage sale of the whole outfit.

Tack the little food card in its place. Read it daily and observe its precepts. It will then become the handwriting on the wall to the kaiser, and we will be healthier, wealthier and wiser as a nation than ever before.

Greece Enters the World War.

Greece has now assumed the character of an active belligerent, ending the only uncertainty prevailing as to the time of its ultimate participation. That Greece would enter the war has been apparent for many months, and since the overthrow of King Constantine it has been sure that the Hellenes would soon be arrayed on the side of the Allies.

From the diplomatic point of view the presence of the Greeks may add to the complications already difficult and in some ways delicate. Greece has some territorial aspirations that conflict with those of Italy and Serbia.

Greece's move at present is of greatest importance, as it makes available a quarter of a million of men for use where they should be of greatest service. Our own burden is increased to the extent that America will be expected to supply munitions for the Greek army.

Hats Off to Des Moines!

The Bee freely gives space in another column on this page to a letter from the director of the Greater Des Moines committee taking exception to some of the references we have made to Des Moines in our discussion of the location there of the army cantonment for this district.

The Bee's allusion to Des Moines' railway facilities, which apparently struck the discord, it must be understood, were by comparison with Omaha's, and the accuracy of our claim for the superiority of Omaha is plainly conceded even though Des Moines may insist that its railway facilities are "more than ample to meet demands."

Be that as it may, the water has run by the mill and we hope Des Moines will satisfy all expectations in taking care of the soldiers in training, a task which we confess we are disappointed not to have devolved upon Omaha. In truth, if Omaha could not have the cantonment we do not know of another place we would prefer to see it located than Des Moines.

Silver in Pursuit of Wheat.

Silver, handmaid of commerce and "pale and common drudge 'tween man and man," is beginning to show such signs of vivacity and sprightliness as entitles it to front page attention.

The principal being the use of a large amount for subsidiary coinage in the countries now at war. Silver also is being more extensively employed in arts and industry, a natural outcome of the extraordinary "prosperity" that has attended disturbed conditions.

Conservation on a Practical Basis.

The program of an Omaha hotel for its canning campaign tends to put the conservation of the food crop on a practical as well as an efficiency basis. Its management invites housewives who are skilled in making preserves, jams and jellies and other such dainties from fruits and vegetables to enter into contracts to do the work on a wholesale scale.

Minimum Stature for the Army.

Lowering the minimum standard of stature and weight for enlistment in the army will admit many who have been rejected solely because of their physical proportions. This move has not been taken because of shortage in men, but in recognition of the established fact that men of small stature are not necessarily disqualified.

A Superfarm

By Frederic J. Haskin
Akron, O., July 15.—There are two kinds of farms in this country. The common and usual sort is a piece of land from which some citizen is more or less successfully making a living.

The farm of Ohio C. Barber, a wealthy match manufacturer, which is located a few miles from this city, is typical of this latter class of farm. Mr. Barber keeps some 2,000 pigeons apparently for the sole purpose of having the right kind of squabs for breakfast every morning.

Here is the largest herd of thoroughbred Guernsey cattle in the country—a herd absolutely free from disease and of the very best breeding. The farmer who buys a bull from the Anna Dean farm improves the quality of his dairy herd.

If you wish to see this model farm you will be given a pass made out on a special form which states that the owner will not be responsible if you get hurt, after which you are turned loose to find the various department heads for yourself.

The pigeon man, for example, has no concern on earth but the welfare of his 2,000 pigeons, including Homers, Royal Whites, Italian Runts (which are the largest variety known) and Buff Emperors.

After leaving Mr. Pearson you will call upon Mr. Linder, who has charge of 12,000 White Leghorns and incidentally of a pack of four Great Dane dogs, lean and powerful as panthers, who guard the poultry houses at night.

The Guernsey herd is the pride of the farm. There are several hundred of these most aristocratic cattle, and it is said to be the largest herd of pure-bred Guernseys in the world.

The place is not beautiful. There is not enough woodland and water. But it gives a tremendous impression of the recking fatness of the earth, of what the bounty of nature may be made by millions.
