Asks Court to Make Former Husband Pay Alimony

Mrs. Louise Von Dorn, divorced wife of John E. Von Dorn, attorney, has begun a fight before Judge Day, sitting in equity court, to enforce a judgment for $11,000 alimony granted her in 1908.

Her attorneys allege she got only $3,000 of the amount awarded her by the court when she was granted a decree in 1908.

Mr. Von Dorn was married to his stenographer, Nellie Rubin, at Glenwood, Ia., in 1911.

Mrs. Von Dorn No. 2 was not in court.

Mrs. Von Dorn No. 1 testified she and her husband started to live together again the day after the divorce was granted in 1908.

Judge Day intimated the Omaha attorney may find himself with two wives before the case is ended.

Though the Von Dorns were divorced, the fact they lived together three years after the decree was granted, according to Mr. Von Dorn No. 1's testimony, may constitute a common law marriage, Judge Day said.

Jerry Howard Organizing Union for Scrub Women

Scrub Women's union No. 1 is about to be organized. At least Jerry Howard says he has some twenty-five of the women talked into the notion of organizing and demanding a minimum of $50 a month.

Postmaster Charles E. Fanning asked Howard to get out of the post office building when Jerry recently scolded about the halls agitating for organization among the scrub women.

"By the gee, throw me out," shouted Jerry.

"Oh, no," replied Postmaster Fanning. "I'm too wise to do that, for you'd be running to the newspapers with the story. But I should nevertheless like to have you go and stop agitating."

Jerry succeeded in seeing some twenty-five of the women in various parts of the city and he declares all of them are willing to join the union. Jerry has been investigating the wages paid and insists that the average charwoman in the banks and other big buildings in Omaha get only $30 a month for scrubbing all night long, while those in the court house get $50.

Clark Refuses to Heed Anonymous Booze Tips

Sheriff Clark yesterday reiterated his statement of several months ago that he will pay no heed to anonymous letters and telephone calls "tipping him off" to places where "booze is being sold."

"Anyone who asks me to investigate places should give their names, at least," said Sheriff Clark. "If they know booze is being sold, it is their duty to let the authorities know, but names must be given. I'm tired of getting letters signed 'Booster for a Drier Omaha,' 'A Taxpayer,' 'A Well Wisher,' etc. We welcome information on people and places who violate the law, but anyone who is interested enough to write letters, should be conscientious enough to give their names."

Police Act on Tip to Raid Hotel and Make Arrest

She was unable to appear against Bon Jordan in police court on account of a blood-poisoned foot. Bon Jordan is held for investigation and will be given a hearing in police court when the girl is able to appear.

HOW HUNGRY HORDE AT FT. CROOK DINES

Good Square Meal Served to 150 Soldiers and Dishes Washed in 20 Minutes; How Uncle Sam Works.

By BEATRICE FURMAN. (Staff Correspondent for The Bee.)

A good, square meal of two courses served to 250 men and the dishes all washed and put away in twenty minutes!

How's that, Madame Housewife and Monsieur Restaurant Keeper, for a record? Can you beat it?

It takes the United States army to do things with thoroughness and dispatch. And if they only "clean up" on the Kaiser's forces as well as they do on the mess hall table at Fort Crook the war will end shortly.

A Bee reporter and a Bee photographer were invited to dinner, so the statement that it was a good dinner comes with authority. Here's the menu, a sample of the ones served the boys each day:

Boiled beef with Spanish sauce. Potatoes. Bread and butter. Rice pudding with milk. Tea.

And the Spanish sauce had onions and tomatoes, green peppers and kindred spicy things in it, while the rice pudding was "chock full" of raisins. There was plenty of sugar for the tea and every one had all the helpings he wanted from the big steaming kettles.

The machine gun company and the sanitary detachment played hosts. They had not been warned of their guests coming, so there was no time to get up a "company" dinner. Every day fare in the camp was what they wanted to sample and they came away satisfied that Uncle Sam is feeding his men well.

See the Grub Vanish!

The mess sergeant is allowed 46 cents a day for each man. As the commissary department, of course, makes no profit on its sales, and buys in wholesale quantities, this is a liberal allowance.

A bushel of potatoes, twenty-five loaves of bread, ten pounds of sugar, were some of the things required for this one meal served to the two companies. The cooks are enlisted men, each a culinary specialist. All the kitchens are daily inspected and cleanliness and order are the rule.

But who wouldn't be a cook under such pleasant conditions? For, let us whisper to Madame Housewife, the soldiers wash their own dishes, as well as set their own table. When your boy comes home you will find him learned in more than the arts of war.

Promptly at noon the mess call sounded and the whole bunch clattered down the stairs into the mess hall. Each carried his little kitchen kit, of two plates, a cup, knife, fork and spoon, all of aluminum. These fold up compactly when not in use. A long line formed before the serving table, a la cafeteria, the plates were rapidly heaped with food and the tables filled. No table cloths are used, but the boards are scrubbed white.

Oh, These Army Cooks.

After a morning of drilling in the open appetites need no coaxing and the food vanishes as if by magic. Each soldier, as he finishes, carries his dishes to the kitchen, washes them and puts them away in an appointed place.

Twenty minutes, then, and the dishes washed. The cook can eat his own dinner and go out to enjoy himself till 4:30, when he returns to get supper. Who wouldn't be a cook in the United States army?
