Little, But Ambitious, This Pickaninny of Thirteen

That patriots are patriots, whether young or old, white or black, was proved Saturday afternoon by a little negro boy, who, with his equally small black sister backing him up in his laudable effort, tried to get into the great war machine of the United States of America—and couldn't. Just after the big parade Saturday afternoon, and while things were sort of dull in the recruiting office of Battery E of the First Tennessee field artillery, a little negro boy, some 3 feet tall and barefooted, walked into the office. A little negro girl sucking a very large pickle, followed behind him.

The little pickaninny pulled off his cap and rolled his eyes at one of the recruiting officers, said gravely: "I wants to join de army."

For a minute the men were stunned. But nobody laughed.

"What do you want to do in the army?" the officer said.

"I wants to work. I can chop kin'lin'."

This was a puzzling situation for the officer. The boy was in dead earnest. The officer turned to the little girl.

"Are you his sister?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you want him to join the army?"

"Yes, sir."

Not a smile from anybody.

"I saw a sign in de parade says come to 502 Church street to join," said the little negro hopefully.

"This is the place," said the officer, "but I'm afraid you're a little bit too young to join."

"Ise 13," declared the little fellow stoutly.

The officer shook his head, but to hold out hope to the little patriot, told him to report to the captain of the Nashville negro company, who would give him something to do.

"All right, sir," said the little pickaninny as he was leaving. "I'll find him, fer I sho' does want to join."

Two Motor Cars Wrecked; Occupants Narrowly Escape

An automobile driven by A. H. Chisholm of Benson and a machine driven by Mrs. E. C. Leggett, 22 Strehlow apartments, collided at Eighteenth and California last night. Both machines were badly wrecked. Although there were four passengers in the Leggett car and five in the Chisholm machine, no one was injured except Mrs. J. B. Keeney of Chicago, who was riding in the Leggett car. She sustained slight lacerations about the arms when struck by flying glass.

Chisholm, whom the police say was driving on the wrong side of the street, was booked on a charge of violating the traffic ordinances.

Everett Buckingham Reports Conditions Prosperous in West

Everett Buckingham, general manager of the Union Stock Yards company, has returned from a short trip to Worland, Wyo., where he visited his daughter, who lives on a ranch near there.

"The country looked prosperous and the crops are good," said Mr. Buckingham. "A big new beet sugar factory is being built at Worland."

"I was down in Casper, too, and the country down there is developing fast, because of the oil they are finding. All of the country I was in is in the best condition and speaks well for the prosperity of the United States."

Burlington Builds Spurs Of Track Into Fort Crook

Several spurs of new switch tracks for the Burlington railroad are being built leading into Fort Crook. This will make easier the moving of the troops and handling of supplies at the fort.

Burlington officials, as well as those of other roads, are not giving out information about the preparations for troop movements soon to begin.

"There will be no difficulty in moving the troops, we can promise that," said L. M. Whitehead, chief clerk to General Passenger Agent L. W. Wakeley. "If necessary we will stop the passenger trains to do it."

Live Stock Sanitary Board Holds Its Annual Meeting

Annual meeting of the Nebraska Live Stock Sanitary board was held at the Stock Yards Exchange hall Wednesday. Colonel James H. Balla was re-elected president, and Dr. J. S. Anderson, state veterinarian, was re-elected secretary.

Methods of preventing tuberculosis were discussed. The board endorsed the plan of getting a train to go through the state demonstrating and lecturing on tuberculosis and the way to prevent its spreading.
