Society Seeks Old Swimming Hole With First Days of Intense Heat

LESS has been said this year than last about the "good old swimming hole," but when the weather finally grew viciously warm the lure of the cool lake or pool was too strong to be resisted. Then, without any blaze of glory or any press notices, swimming came into its own and burned faces and arms appeared in the best society. At the Council Bluffs Rowing association any number of young people have spent their leisure hours in swimming. Some of the girls, whose very best men have gone away in the service of their country, spend Friday evenings in the water, while others, younger or older, enjoy the weekly dinner dance.

One group of girls well known in Omaha, who are devoted friends, have taken swimming very seriously with the result that they are adepts in the art. Last Tuesday, you remember, was a broiling day on the countryside. These girls, the Misses Beatrice and Genevieve Tinley, Irene Kinzel and Mary Mitchell, thinking that the atmosphere was propitious for a swim, went to the lake and were just ready for the grand plunge when scudding across the lake came a furious wind. It chased the whitecaps high up on the boat docks and with the hail played havoc around the place. Swimming was out of the question for a while. Miss Genevieve Tinley swam in safely after a dive off the spring board, but farther than that they could not venture until after the storm had abated. When it did the little group piled into the water for a short swim.

Wednesday at Carter lake was another warm, moist day. Hosts of women who came to the club for the "yarn week" bridge party took advantage of the lake to go swimming. Misses Isabelle Pearsall, Frances Patton and Louise McEwan, the Hawaiian musicians of the afternoon, with their friend, Miss Kathleen Giveen, stopped their swimming long enough to play a tune and have a little dance on the shore. In gay bathing suits with yellow leis about their necks and tinkling ukeleles in their hands they made an animated group.

Miss Norma McMillan of New York, who is the guest of Miss Edna Peterson, swims well. While swimming at Valley the other day she burned her arms badly, so that the water will not attract her again until they have healed.

Mrs. Charles Fanning has long been one of the best swimmers of the many clever women swimmers in Omaha. Her stroke is long and sure and she seems perfectly at ease in the water. She has reached the stage of accomplishment when long distance swims appeal to her and on many a pleasant day she can be seen swimming farther away from the dock than anyone else at the club. Her friends grumbled when she left them for even a half hour to enjoy a little swim while they played bridge inside, but she didn't seem to mind.
