In the evening the king kindly answered that he had ordered his government to use every possible in-fluence with his allies to repudiate taking any provocative military measures. At the same time His Majesty asked me, I should transmit to Vienna the British proposal that Austria was to take Belgrade and a few other Servian towns and strip of drummer boy. Only a few days more country as a main mise (sic) to make and he would have been off—safe sure that the Servian promises on paper should be fulfilled in reality. This proposal was in the same moment telegraphed to me from Vienna for London quite in conjunction with the British proposal; besides, I had telegraphed to His Majesty, the Czar, the same as an idea of mine before I received the two communications from Vienna and London. As both were of the same opinion I transmitted the telegrams vice versa to Vienna and London. I felt that I was able to tide the question over and happy at the peaceful outlook.
