German Financial Reform Deferred Until After War

Copenhagen, Aug. 14.+Herr Schiffinance, who has been entrusted with drafting the financial program covering war expenditures, says in an interview in a Berlin newspaper that the government's proposed tax and financial reform will be deferred until after the war.

As a basic principle, he believes the number of taxes should be as small as possible because a few incisive taxes are better than attempting to spread, the burden with a large numher of small taxes. He thinks it is necessary to avoid hampering industry on whose development the hope depends of raising the mighty sums required.
