YOUNG WOMEN MAY LEARN TELEGRAPHY

Y. W. C. A. to Also Offer Special Courses in French, English and Salesmanship.

One of the serious problems confronting the business world just now, with so many young men being called into military service, is the scarcity of trained telegraphers. As a preparatory measure, the Young Women's Christian association is offering a course in this important subject, as positions in telegraph offices will have to be filled by girls and women.

The Western Union Telegraph company, realizing the gravity of the problem, has offered to install an equipment in the association building, to make possible the study of telegraphy.

Another branch which will be of compelling attention on account of the war is the study of French. Our present relations with France make this language far more interesting to us than ever before. To meet the growing demand the French department at the Young Women's Christian association will have additional classes during the coming year.

The current events class, which was very popular last year, will doubtless have increased attendance this season, for we are "making history" every day during these war times and this class will be of great aid in keeping up with the rapid trend of events.

The United States government is laying special stress on the teaching of English and has asked the Young Women's Christian associations all over the country to co-operate with it. Classes for new Americans, beginning and advanced classes, will be an important part of the educational work of the association. Courses will be offered in practical English and business English.

A new and popular course in salesmanship will also be offered. This course will not only include theory, but some practice work, and will be given by an expert.

Office training and commercial law are two of the practical courses offered.

The domestic science and household arts departments will present the following courses: Dietetics, cookery, 1, 2, 3; luncheon, class, supper class, special cookery, diet in disease and canteen cookery.

Dressmaking—This course is especially designed for those who wish to learn dressmaking as a trade. Those who wish to learn to sew for themselves can be accommodated in other classes.

The course in millinery will include frame construction and trimming.

A course in expression includes exercises for developing poise, precision and endurance in sitting, standing and walking, analysis and interpretation of selections from classic literature.

Present Is Opportune Time for Young Folks

The young man or young woman who fails to enter a good business college this fall will miss the biggest opportunity ever presented, according to President H. B. Boyles of Boyles college.

"It is an unusual situation," said Mr. Boyles, "brought about by the arrival of a critical period in the life of the nation. Enlistment of young men in the military service has rendered vacant thousands of good positions in the business world. In addition, the military activities of the government has made necessary the creation of many new clerical and stenographic positions in the nation's service."

"Now all these new positions and the old ones that have been left vacant, must be filled by young men and women. It is obvious that men who are too old for military service will not be considered for these places, because they cannot adapt themselves readily to new conditions. Hence the opportunity is for the young people.

"If young men are face to face with their biggest chance, as they are, think what the situation means to young women. Positions are offered them more numerous than ever before and in avenues where they never before hoped for employment. More than ever before they will be given responsible positions in the large industrial concerns. The railroads are opening up the telegraph service to them; in fact, one big eastern road is now employing 2,000 of them. This is significant when you consider the fact that Boyles college has never been able to turn out enough telegraphers to meet the demand."

College of St. Thomas.

The college of St. Thomas, St. Paul, Minn., which last year has added a stately chapel to the buildings that fringe an ever-lengthening line the avenue winding through the grounds. Embodying the grace and dignity of the Byzantine churches of northern Italy, the new chapel constitutes a distinct acquisition to the college, and a contribution to ecclesiastical architecture in the northwest. The college now comprises a large and comfortable residence hall, chapel, dormitory, recitation hall, armory and club house, and military building. These buildings, with the grounds represent an investment of nearly $1,000,000.

Eight hundred and thirty students were enrolled at St. Thomas last year. Of these, the northwest contributed the bulk, but more distant states, among them New York, Rhode Island, California, Oklahoma, Washington, Wyoming and Kentucky, contributed their quota.

The students are organized into a corps of cadets, comprising nine companies, a military brass band, a signal corps and other minor organizations. An officer of the United States army, detailed by the War department and assisted by four energetic sergeants of the regular army, has charge of the military training. Every day every student turns out under arms, for an hour of drill forms part of the daily routine at St. Thomas.

St. Thomas is recognized as an institution of full collegiate rank by the University of Minnesota; it is accredited to the North-Central Association of Colleges, an affiliation which opens to its students the doors of every university and college in eighteen states. Its credits are honored in various eastern universities and at West Point.

The prospects of St. Thomas for the coming year look bright. With its grounds extending over fifty-five acres in the most beautiful suburb of St. Paul, with its eight buildings, with its splendid library and its excellently equipped laboratories, and with

WORLD AS VIEWED BY THE ANCIENTS

Maps Published Centuries Ago and Now Owned by Henry Kieser Out of Line With the Present.

Reposing in a vault in the book store of Henry Kieser is a book of ancient maps made from 1650 to 1750, said to be one of the most valuable books in Omaha. It contains forty-seven maps and in the New York book market such maps sell at from $200 to $250 each. At this price the book would be worth some $10,000.

The maps were printed in Amsterdam, Holland, and are the work of the geographers, Carolus Allard, Nicolaus Visscher and others. The maps are geographical and war, and navigators' charts. They are highly colored by hand.

The fourth map in the book is that of America. All the northwest part is blank. California is shown as an island. The Mississippi and Missouri rivers are missing. Lake Michigan is shown vaguely as the "Glacial Sea."

New York and the New England states are marked "New Francia." A large bay is shown to extend in through Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana to the Great Lakes.

Desert a Fertile Plain. The map of Africa represents the Nile to have its source in two lakes south of the equator. One of these lakes is connected by river with the Atlantic ocean. What is the Sahara desert is shown to be fertile land.

Another map shows the campaigns of the King of France and the allies in the low countries in the year 1690. It shows the lines of march and every battle line and the letter press attached shows a chronological history of the campaigns from 1690 to 1693.

"The collection of maps was probably made from 100 to 150 years ago," said Mr. Kieser, "and was bound in pasteboard. Mr. Spofford, the librarian of congress, declares it to be the most valuable collection of maps of the period that he has ever seen. A few of them, but very few, are in the congressional library and are highly prized."

Mr. Kieser secured the book from the library of the late General Charles F. Manderson, who received it from the chaplain of his regiment, who, in turn, bought it in London.

Mosher Institute. Away with the din of downtown traffic, with a wide stretching green campus and shaded by beautiful trees, the Mosher Institute located in its attractive Terrace Club House connected with the Strehlow apartments, offers undoubtedly the most ideal surroundings for studying and comfort of any short-hand school in the middle west.

It was in response to an insistent demand for instruction in Mosher shorthand and typewriting, that the Mosher Shorthand company decided to organize a permanent institute where students may specialize on these subjects.

F. W. Mosher, well known in Omaha as a shorthand instructor, is president of the Mosher Shorthand company and he now devotes practically all his time to teaching his system in the institute.

Besides its regular course, the Mosher institute offers at exceptional rates a home study course, which young people employed will find greatly to their advantage to pursue, for they can keep their positions and do their studying during leisure hours. The indications are that the school will be taxed to its capacity when the September 4 class is opened, for it and the home study department is growing in leaps and bounds.

Franklin and Marshall. Franklin and Marshall academy, Lancaster, Pa., is one of the old, historic boys' schools of the country. The last commencement completed its 130th year. It is distinctly a college preparatory school. In the last twenty years about 600 academy boys entered some forty institutions throughout the country from New England colleges in the east to the University of California in the west. Academy boys can enter yearly all colleges and universities on certificates except a few which still admit by examination only.

Academy boys have attained high rank or have been awarded honors at many of the best known institutions in the east, including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Yale, West Point, Cornell, Columbia, Lehigh, Princeton and many smaller colleges. For this reason the academy course he will have standard work, the credit for which will be good at any time and place he may want to use it.
