There are now only twenty women who are fully qualified to instruct classes, although sixty have taken the course and received their first cards," she said.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I seen a grand play last night, a war play," said the Manicure Lady. "It was just grand, all peaceful and no scrapping like you would think unless you had went to see it."

"It couldn't have been much of a war play without no scrapping," said the Head Barber.

"It was, though," declared the Manicure Lady. "It was mostly about some stolen state papers which was took by one of them dipplomaniacs, or diplomats, or something like that. The papers was so important that nearly all them crowned heads of Europe was worried sick in bed. I guess them old boys is worried sick most of the time anyway, these days, but goodness knows them stolen papers put the last crusher on their peace of mind and they took on something terrible."

"I thought all them plays with stolen papers in them was kind of out of date," said the Head Barber. "I thought so, too, till I seen this here show," said the Manicure Lady. "Honest to goodness, George, just when we think people is getting more kind and honest somebody has to come along and steal some papers or raise the price of bread, or something like that, and back we go to the beginning. My old dad has the right dope, I guess. He says the world always was and always will be about the same as it is now."

"He says the human mind can invent pyramids and self starters and things like that, but can't invent anything new in the line of human nature, which my old gent says is two-thirds cussedness and one-third fear of getting caught."

"Of course father has had some awful kicks in the shins during his life, George, and maybe he's too clinical, but in a way the old boy's about right, I guess. Seems to me like there was more weeds than flowers in the garden of life."

"I often thought that, only I ain't got that grand way of putting it, said the Head Barber. "I was going to take the Missus to one of them war plays like you was telling about, but she weakened at the last. It seems one of her nephews was a supe in 'Shenandoah' a good many years ago, and he got shot by accident in the war scene by another supe that didn't know his gun was loaded with bird

What Women Are Doing

The National American Woman Suffrage association is to celebrate its golden jubilee two years hence.

Dr. Elizabeth Woods, a former teacher at Vassar, has been appointed state psychologist of Washington.

The Women's National Farm and Garden association is to hold its annual meeting in Chicago next month.

For many years women have enjoyed the right of suffrage in some of the most important localities in India.

Mrs. Arthur Capper, wife of the present governor of Kansas, is the daughter of Samuel J. Crawford, who was governor of Kansas during the civil war.

Twenty-five women of East Orange, N. J., have voluntarily undertaken the task of keeping in repair the uniforms and clothing of the New Jersey soldiers encamped at the New York.

Winona, Minn., has a police woman because 5,000 women, affiliated with civic and church clubs of that city, took the police club at its work, contributed the first year's salary for that official and saw that she was installed with full authority as a member of the police department.
