U. S. Food Administration Calls Upon Women to Help

Women of America: Help your country; help the hungry women and children across the seas. Wake to the need of your efforts to save the food which is so mighty a factor in the war.

A little thought, a little self denial and you have proved your patriotism. You have helped to gladden the heart of some woman in a foreign land whose child is pinched and wan from hunger.

When a general determines on a great victory he does not ask his army to go out individually and kill a few of the enemy from time to time. He masses his armies and plans his campaign.

That is what the United States food administration has done. Have you enrolled as a soldier? In other words, have you signed the pledge card of the United States food administration?

Do your part. Sign at once. Keep your pledge. Food will win the war.

MOORE PUTS BLAME ALL ON HIS WIFE

In Suit for Divorce Railroad Man Tells of the Storms He Encountered on Matrimonial Seas.

Stephen A. Moore, former employee of the Union Pacific, says he now would be holding a responsible position were it not for his wife, Nellie L. Moore.

In a divorce suit filed in district court, Moore makes divers and sundry allegations along the line of "she made me what I am today, I hope she's satisfied."

The Moores were married in Horton, Kan., in 1893. One of his charges against his wife is the allegation that she once asked that a certain girl working in his department be discharged and then made a scene at railroad headquarters because he would not comply with the request.

Moore says he was sent to Como, Colo., on business and relates that his wife insisted on accompanying him. When they got there, he says, they discovered that there was only "one house in the town fit to live in." He says his wife refused to live in this house. On another occasion, Moore alleges, she prevented him from accompanying several high-up Union Pacific officials on an inspection trip.

Moore sets forth that he went to Missouri in 1915 to visit a brother and that his wife had him arrested on a charge of white slavery, which he says was so absurd that officials immediately released him when he had made explanations. He says she again had him arrested on the same charge in Omaha and caused his confinement in jail for a short time.

South Side people have responded well to the call for books for the soldiers. Forty or fifty books are brought to the library every week. Many of the books are new and nearly all are interesting and have been well chosen.

More Women Are Running Lifts in Omaha Buildings

More and more girls are taking jobs in Omaha office buildings operating the elevators. For years a woman has been operating an elevator in the Brown block, and for a long time she was the only woman handling such a job in Omaha, or in the middle west. Recently, however, the women have been displacing men in these jobs in many of the buildings. Among the more recent buildings to install girls in the elevators are the First National bank building and the City National bank building.

This movement began to take on speed in Omaha after the convention of the National Building Owners and Managers was held in Omaha some weeks ago. At that time some of the building managers reported their successes with women as elevator operators, and at several conferences held on the subject, managers pointed out that the women are in many cases even more careful and painstaking than the men in this work. At the same time it was pointed out that the installation of women in these jobs would tend to release more men for the armies and for other important jobs that men can fill in these times better than women.
