Motor to Foot Ball Game.

Attracted by the crisp October day, which, despite the wind, was good for motoring as well as foot ball, several parties of Omahans went to Lincoln Saturday in their cars. The Notre Dame-Nebraska game, which is always a "close" game, was an especially interesting one this year, the fans said when they returned.

Many of the parties stopped at one of the small towns on the way for luncheon, while others took a picnic lunch and ate it at some inviting spot on the road.

One of the small parties included Miss Grace Allison, Miss Helen Ingwersen, Mr. Paul Shirley and Mr. Charles Allison, who went down in the Allison car.

Mr. and Mrs. Edard Creighton had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beaton and Mrs. Creighton's sister, Mrs. Isaac Raymond, of Lincoln.

Mrs. Sanford Gifford, Miss Hazel Uplike, Miss Ruth Carter, Mr. Milton Darling, Mr. Fred Gribble and Mr. Fred Gilbert made up another of the parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Meyer were seen at the game, as were also Mr. Joseph Baldrige and Mr. W. Farnam Smith.

Mr. Burdette Kirkendall, Mr. Philip Chase and several of their friends from the balloon school at Fort Omaha were among the Omaha rooters.

Miss Mildred Todd was included in another party of young folks who motored to the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hascall, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Langan, "Spike" Kennedy, Lieutenant Roger McCullough, Loring Elliott, Gene Melady and Lou Loring also witnessed the game.

Other line parties will be given by Mr. H. S. Mann, who will have six, and ex-Senator Brown, five.

Flour Substitutes

Because of the present need to conserve wheat, certain other food materials can be substituted by the housekeeper in making bread generally, says today's bulletin of the National Emergency Food Garden commission, working in conjunction with this newspaper in a nation-wide conservation campaign.

The next series of bulletins on food conservation will deal with flour substitutes and the housewife is urged to save each day's bulletin so as to have the complete set for future use.

Every housekeeper is familiar with the use of corn meal, which can be used without the addition of any flour in making bread, gems, griddle cakes, etc. But she may use corn meal also in preparing light bread, hot biscuits and cookies. Other substances which will lend themselves admirably to the making of very soft of quick bread are rice, sweet potato, peanuts, soybean meal, milo, kafir, feterita, dashen, banana, rye, oats, barley, etc.

The recipes to be published in the following lessons are a few of those which may be used and merely suggest some of the possible combinations of these various food materials which will yield new and very palatable breads. It must be kept in mind that no other substance has gluten such as is found in wheat and which gives to this cereal the ability to producing light and spongy bread. In any of the following lessons, sour milk or buttermilk and soda may be substituted for sweet milk and baking powder. To guard against an excess of soda, which causes a yellow color in the bread, use one-half to three-fourths level teaspoonful of soda to every cup of sour milk. The soda should be sifted with the other ingredients.

The mixing should be done as quickly as possible, especially after the baking powder is moistened, to minimize the loss of leavening gas. Biscuits should be rolled, cut, and placed on the pans as soon as possible after mixing. If necessary, they may stand in the pans before baking with comparative safety, but it is much better to bake immediately.

Wheat meal is ground whole wheat or Graham flour. This is to be distinguished from white flour or wheat flour sold at the stores.

Ancient Birth Records Are Found at City Hall

Omaha birth records of 1874, found in the city hall archives by City Clerk O'Connor, were interesting to the Oldest Inhabitant who called at the city health office where these documents are being filed with other vital statistics.

One of the cards is the birth record of Josiah B. Redfield, jr., now president of the K-B Printing company. His was born "South of Tenth street, just outside of the city limits." Dr. O. S. Wood, attending physician, is now living in the Masonic home at Plattsmouth. The date of the birth was July 23, 1874.

The cards show that children were born to these pioneer residents: Simon and Bertha Trostler, Constantine and Kate Gallagher, Henry and Mary Hornberger, Thomas F. and Amelia J. Hall, Andrew and Mrs. Murphy, A. Pollack and wife, James and Anne Neville, J. E. Markel and wife.

Can Produce Ten Million Dozen Suits of Underwear

Washington, Oct. 22.—Plans to produce and sell to the government without profit approximately 120,000,000 suits of underwear annually, or enough to supply each soldier in the allied armies with four sets of light and four heavy garments each year, have been worked out by Louis Steinfeld of New York and probably will be laid before government officials for consideration in a day or two.

Mr. Steinfeld has been organizing into a single corporation about 40 yarn-spinning and knitting mills, having a combined annual output of 10,000,000 dozen suits of knitted underwear.

The parent corporation, to be known as the American Knit Goods corporation, includes many large mills in the east and south.

Red Cross Membership in Nebraska Over 170,000

Red Cross membership in Nebraska totaled 170,000 on September 15, according to figures announced by State Director Frank W. Judson.

"This membership was largely secured in three months. We understand there is not a state in the union with a larger membership at the present time, population considered," said Mr. Judson. "It is a remarkable showing and clearly indicates the patriotism that is prevalent in this section."

A state Red Cross conference will be held in Omaha October 31 and November 1. Officials from Chicago and Washington are expected to attend.

Mrs. A. M. Chalmers Watson, who has been appointed to direct the work of the thousands of women who are serving with the British army in France, was the first to receive a medical degree from Edinburgh university.

Don't Be a Shirk, But Get to Work; Pay Your Bills—Cure Your Ills

If you will let yourself reflect how work cures human ills you'll see that you cannot expect the world to pay your bills. You cannot fail to realize that nature's well known laws will never serve to bring a prize to him who slights its cause. You cannot fail to understand how nature hates a shirk, and scorns the man who'll idly stand while others do the work. The clothes you wear, the stuff you eat, the gasoline you burn, all form a game that can't be beat; you've got them all to earn. The logic of the thing is sound. Just get this through your head. You cannot calmly sit around and think that you'll be fed. You need not think that all things come to those who simply wait. You've got to stir and make things hum, before it grows too late. You've got to join the working mob and do your labor well. You've got to hustle on the job and make your hustling tell. The biggest thing you've got to do is getting stuff in hand to help you see the winter through—stuff dried or stored or canned. You've got to use what summer brings, for winter-time travel. The fates help those who help themselves. This truth is always new. So fully stock your pantry shelves; the fates will then help you.

Complete detailed instructions for preparing vegetables and fruits for winter needs are given in the Home Canning Manual, the Home Drying Manual and the Home Storage Manual issued by the National Emergency Food Garden commission, 210-220 Maryland building, Washington, D. C. A copy of either manual may be had upon request, enclosing 2 cents for postage.

An Inspiration from Russia

By GERTRUDE BERESFORD.

If we are lending Russia the sinews of war, we are its debtor for the inspiration for many coats and turbans. A Russian blouse which boasts of a waistcoat is its latest gift. Made of Russian green duvetyne, belted like a Cossack's uniform, and generously trimmed as to collar, cuffs and border with kolinsky, this suit is distinctive enough. The double breasted blouse fastens with buttons enameled in green and brown. The waistcoat of pale chamois cloth is bound with a heavy grosgrain ribbon striped in orange, green and brown. Roman ribbon on a Russian blouse! The designer juggles the costumes of all nations. He has drawn an inspiration from two of our allies with this happy result.

"Papa" Joffre's Wife

Much has been written and said about "le Pere Joffre," as le Marechal is called in France. But very little has been written about Madame Joffre, not because she is lacking in interest or undeserving of public admiration, but owing entirely to her extreme modesty and simplicity.

She often deprecates the publicity which has been forced upon her, and frankly longs for the peaceful anonymous days of the past, when no one cared where or how she and her family lived, and when she could come and go as she pleased, without the ever-lurking reporter and photographer upon their heels.

Madame Joffre delights in giving pleasure and is always devising some personal gift which will carry something of her thoughtful affection with it. Only the other day she went through the American Red Cross ambulance and presented to each of the officers assembled a pipe bearing the inscription "Souvenir de la Marechale Joffre." Mr. Richard Norton and Mr. Arthur Kemp received her, and she was pleased to praise the work done by the ambulance.

La Marechale is extremely artistic and knows to a nicety the value of a bit of antique porcelain, or the period of some rare painting. She has many art treasures, and her furniture is proof enough that she loves the valuable treasures handed down by generations of art lovers; in fact, some of her furniture might well grace a museum.

On the Seine river, just out of Paris, a houseboat may be seen dreamily reflected in the quiet river. Gay flower boxes, awnings and dainty curtains attract attention, and there is an air of peaceful comfort and happiness surrounding this floating home. Here it is that la Marechale, Madame Joffre and their children spend the summer, returning to their lovely apartment on Rue Michel Ange only when autumn slips into winter.—Harper's Magazine.

The Utah Agricultural college has made special arrangements to train young women quickly to fill positions in business left vacant by men called into military service.

Suffragits in New York City are arranging for a great parade at the end of this month to mark the close of their campaign in New York state.

When Milady Goes Shopping

"If I knew you and you knew me—if both of us could clearly see" we would discover that fish and oysters are excellent food, cheap, and their consumption will help win war.

By ADELAIDE KENNERLY.

"If I knew you and you knew me—if both of us could clearly see, and with an inner sight divine the meaning of your heart and mine, I'm sure that we would differ less and clasp our hands in friendliness: Our thoughts would pleasantly agree, if I knew you and you knew me."

And I am sure that we would differ less on the delivery of fish if we all understood the situation as it really is. Let me tell you a few secrets about the handling and delivering of fish:

There isn't a coast within a thousand miles.

The Great Lakes furnish only certain kinds of fish and they are over-night away from us.

Oyster beds—most of them—are on the eastern and southern coasts. We cannot get the southern oysters in good shape. By shipping them from the beds on the east coast in refrigerator express cars, they reach this section of the country in perfect condition—as good as they are in the east.

BUT—if fish and oysters are carelessly handled; if they are taken from these cars and dumped around unsanitary places; if they are taken from cold storage and put on the delivery wagon, they are soon unfit for food. The scarcity of delivery boys and soaring prices make it impossible to have "specials" so the regular wagon is the only course to pursue.

Fish and oysters are cheaper, even though shipped in express refrigerator cars, than meat, and according to the rules of scientific eating, much more easily digested. In fact fish is often called brain food because it takes less strength to digest it than meat, and one does not suffer the sluggish feeling which comes after a heavy meal.

BUT—this same excellent food, which helps to reduce the high cost of living, is a most dangerous one if improperly handled. Potomac poisoning from eating stale fish and oysters has caused many severe cases of illness—and they spoil much more quickly than red meats.

Now that we know how valuable this food is and with how much care certain merchants handle it; that we can, by knowing where to go, get sea food as fresh as those people who live on the coast; that

Electric Chair for Happy Fat People

The inventor of a very comfortable looking electric chair on exhibition at the Electrical exposition can hardly be classed with those who assert that "nobody loves a fat man." This electric chair differs radically from the famous one at Sing Sing in that its purpose is not to execute, but rather to remove painlessly surplus flesh. In fact, to secured the desired results, all that stout people have to do is to recline leisurely in the chair for a few minutes every day.

The professor in charge of this chair states that it accomplishes the desired results primarily through the synchronous contraction of the musculature; and, secondarily, through the electro-chemical action of the Faradic current passing through the tissues. This chair is one of the features of the Electrical hospital, which in turn is one of 150 exhibits at the Electrical exposition.

More Than Million Dollars In One Cargo of Wool

An Atlantic Port, Oct. 22.—A sailing vessel brought a cargo of wool from South Africa valued at more than $1,000,000 to this port yesterday. The vessel was nearly a week overdue.
