CAR SITUATION UP TO THE BOARDS

Question Whether State or National Authority Shall Control Again to the Front at Lincoln.

Lincoln, Oct. 25.—(Special).—To what extent the State Railway commission can enforce the operation of the new car shortage law in this state was the subject of a conference today between the commission, representatives of all the railroads operating in the state and shippers.

The law provides that whenever the commission deems it expedient it can allow the law to a certain extent to be inoperative, as long as its general provisions are not interfered with.

According to representatives of the roads, the railroad committee the government committee and the committee of the Interstate Commerce commission are working together in harmony for the purpose of getting cars to the places most needed.

Both men have shucking records and are anxious to go to the fields, provided the farmers who hire them have plenty of chickens. Outside of that little inducement they are not so particular.

Mr. Williams today received a telegram from "H" company of the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth United States Infantry, formerly the Fifth Nebraska, stating that the Hamilton county contingent has bought $5,000 worth of Liberty bonds.

Every precinct chairman and officer of the Hamilton County Women's Council of Defense has individually bought a Liberty bond.

WILL IT HURT? How Many Dentists Can Give a Satisfactory Answer, to Both Patient and Conscience? Fear is the strongest of the emotions. In the public mind pain has always been associated with dentistry. People allow good teeth to decay, jeopardize health and comfort because they fear pain and yet they are finally driven to the dentist by the very pain they sought to avoid. So great is this fear that the wonderful progress of dentistry as a science and the great achievements of many individual dentists are entirely lost sight of in the more vivid impression made upon the public mind that "IT HURTS."

To this day—patients come to me in fear and trembling and ask over and over again the dreaded question "WILL IT HURT" and despite my positive assurance that the tooth will be extracted without pain, distrust and fear is written upon each face until the offending tooth is held up before the astonished vision and smiles chase away the waiting tears. I have often said and still repeat that half the pain inflicted in the dental chair was entirely unnecessary due to carelessness, lack of skill or plain cruelty. I also desire to reiterate that all unnecessary pain is entirely eliminated in this office. I have extracted countless thousands of teeth, even live nerves have been removed without the slightest twinge on the part of the patient and within a few feet of our reception rooms where waiting patients were unaware that aching teeth were being removed practically every minute.
